Overview & Current Events

ABB is a global provider of automation technologies and power solutions. The company operates in more than 100 countries and has three business units: Electrification Products, Robotics & Motion, and Industrial Automation. ABB is incorporated in Switzerland, but domestic investors can initiate an ownership stake in the company through American Depository Receipts that trade with a market capitalization of US$40 billion under the ticker ABB on the New York Stock Exchange.

In mid-April, ABB reported (4/17/19) financial results for the first quarter of fiscal 2019. The company grew its comparable orders by 3% thanks to 9% growth in the Americas and 5% growth in Asia, Middle East and Africa, which were partly offset by a 3% decrease in Europe. ABB also grew its comparable revenues by 4% thanks to sustained growth in Electrification Products and Robotics & Motion. Book-to-bill ratio decreased from 1.17 in last year's quarter to 1.11 while operational earnings-per-share remained flat over last year's quarter, at $0.31 per share.

On April 17th, ABB announced the departure of CEO Ulrich Spiesshofer, who will temporarily be replaced by Chairman Peter Voser. Although the former led the company to an industrial automation business model, the stock rallied 5% on the news. However, the stock has pared all its gains since then. The interim CEO stated that he will continue the transition of ABB to an industrial automation company.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

ABB's per-share growth in net income over the last decade has been far from compelling. This helps explain the fact that the stock is currently trading at the level it was trading 10 years ago. With that said, ABB has a number of current growth opportunities that lead us to believe its future performance will be stronger than its historical track record. We expect 6% average annual growth of earnings-per-share over the next five years. On the other hand, due to disappointing performance in Europe this year, we have lowered our earnings-per-share estimate from $1.50 to $1.15.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2009	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	Now	2024
Avg. P/E	13.1	18.0	16.1	15.9	18.6	20.8	23.1	22.9	23.5	17.3	16.5	16.0
Avg. Yld.	2.7%	2.5%	3.1%	3.8%	3.1%	3.3%	3.7%	3.7%	3.1%	3.4%	4.2%	4.0%

ABB has traded at an average price-to-earnings ratio of 18.9 over the last decade. With that said, this sample includes several years (2014-2017) in which the stock traded with an elevated P/E ratio. We believe that fair value for a company of ABB's caliber lies somewhere around 16 times earnings. The stock is currently trading near our assumed fair value, at a price-to-earnings ratio of 16.5. If the stock trades at our estimated fair earnings multiple of 16.0 five years from now, the stock will incur a 0.6% annualized drag due to the contraction of its valuation level.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Payout	35.7%	44.1%	49.3%	60.2%	58.5%	68.1%	86.2%	85.2%	73.8%	58.6%	69.6%	64.9%

ABB has global businesses that are either the #1 or #2 player in attractive markets, with strong secular growth. The company expects its business markets to grow by 3.5%-4.0% per year on average over the long run. Thanks to its dominant position in its segments, ABB has a strong reputation and thus enjoys a significant competitive advantage over its peers.

Moreover, the company has a strong balance sheet, with its interest expense currently consuming only 11% of its operating income. On the other hand, the performance of the company is greatly affected by underlying economic growth and oil prices, which are beyond its control. Due to this vulnerability, the stock tends to underperform the market during sell-offs. Consequently, only investors who can tolerate significant pressure on the stock price should consider purchasing this stock.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

ABB has a variety of appealing characteristics. It is a global business with leadership in many segments of the industrial sector. The company's recent acquisitions as well as its edge in electric vehicle infrastructure should propel its growth for the foreseeable future. Thanks to its poor stock price performance in the last 12 months, ABB has the potential to offer a 9.6% average annual return over the next five years, in the absence of a recession. However, it should be noted that the company has a markedly poor performance record, it is not recession resistant and has an elevated chance of poor performance and a possible dividend reduction during a severe recession. Collectively, we rate shares as a hold.
