Overview & Current Events

Canadian Natural Resources is an energy company that operates in the acquisition, exploration, development, production, marketing, and sale of crude oil, natural gas liquids (NGLs), and natural gas. The company is headquartered in Calgary, Alberta. Canadian Natural Resources common stock is cross-listed on the Toronto Stock Exchange and the New York Stock Exchange, where it trades with a market capitalization of US$32 billion. In this report, all figures referenced are in Canadian dollars and the TSX-listed shares have been used for the purpose of valuation analysis.

In early May, Canadian Natural Resources reported (5/9/19) financial results for the first quarter of fiscal 2019. The company greatly benefited from the enforced production cuts of Alberta in an effort to alleviate the supply glut. As a result, the discount of WCS to WTI collapsed in the first quarter and led the company to switch from a loss of $0.21 per share to a profit of $0.70 per share. The great improvement in the results came despite a 4% decrease in the company's production volumes, which was caused by the enforced production cuts.

Due to the collapse of the discount of WCS to WTI, we had to revise our earnings-per-share estimate for the year from $1.50 to $2.25. However, inventories of WCS reached an all-time high level of 37.1 million barrels in April and hence there are renewed concerns over the effectiveness of the production cuts going forward. Investors should be aware of the great uncertainty that surrounds the results of the company, at least for this year.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

As Canadian Natural Resources is an almost pure upstream company, its financial performance has been extremely volatile over the last decade. Given its high sensitivity to commodity prices, it is nearly impossible to make accurate forecasts. With that said, we believe the company's performance is likely to improve considerably moving forward thanks to production growth and somewhat higher prices of oil and natural gas. Management expects to grow production by 7.5% per year on average until 2022. Therefore, we expect earnings-per-share to rebound to about $4.00 by 2024.

Canadian Natural Resources has compounded its per-share dividend at more than 18% per year over the last decade. Due to its high payout ratio this year, we expect dividend growth to decelerate in the upcoming years.

Valuation Analysis

Canadian Natural Resources has traded at an average price-to-earnings ratio of 15.5 over the last decade if we exclude the 2015 – 2017 period, in which the stock's valuation was not meaningful due to depressed earnings. If the company achieves our anticipated earnings-per-share of $4.00 by 2024, we expect the stock to trade around 13 times its annual earnings in that year. As a result, the stock could incur a 3.6% annualized drag due to contraction of its valuation level. Income investors should note that while the Canadian government applies a 15% withholding tax on dividends paid to U.S. residents (including those paid by Canadian Natural Resources), this withholding tax is waived if shares are held within a retirement account like a 401(k).

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2009	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2024
Std. Dev.	40.4%	21.6%	31.4%	24.8%	19.0%	27.7%	33.6%	31.6%	23.9%	48.7%	66.7%	47.5%

The competitive advantage of Canadian Natural Resources is the high quality of its assets, which have a long life and low decline rates. However, due to the almost pure upstream nature of its business, the company is greatly affected by the price of oil and natural gas. This is evident from its depressed earnings during the period of low commodity prices in 2015 - 2017.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Canadian Natural Resources greatly benefited from the enforced production cuts, which supported the price of WCS in the first quarter. Moreover, the stock can offer a 12.9% average annual return over the next five years thanks to 12.2% average annual earnings-per-share growth and its 4.3% dividend, which may be offset by a 3.6% annualized contraction of price-to-earnings ratio. As a result, the stock earns a buy rating from Sure Dividend at current prices, particularly for investors who expect higher prices of oil and natural gas in the upcoming years. On the other hand, investors should note the high sensitivity of the stock to commodity prices and its huge downside risk in the event of a recession or a plunge of the prices of oil and natural gas.
