Overview & Current Events

Shaw Communications was founded in 1966 as the Capital Cable Television Company. It has since grown to become Western Canada's leading content and network provider, catering to both consumers and businesses. The company produces about $5.5 billion in revenue annually and has a market capitalization of $13.8 billion. The stock is listed in both Canada and the US, and we'll be using Canadian dollars throughout the report.

Shaw reported Q3 earnings on June 27th, 2019, and consolidated revenues increased by 2.7% year-over-year while consolidated operating income before restructuring costs and amortization increased 3.8% Year-over-year. The company had an addition of roughly 61,000 Wireless postpaid net subscribers and grew their average billing per unit ("ABPU") by 6.2% YoY. The company has also succeeded in lowering their postpaid customer churn rate even further to 1.18%, down from 1.36% last year.

Net income remained positive with earnings of $229 million, up from a loss of $99 million one year ago. As a result, diluted earnings per share came in at $0.44 vs a loss of $0.20 last year. Year-to-date Shaw has earnings per share of $1.10 vs a loss of $0.34 in the same period one year ago. Free cash flow increased 5.4%, from $167 million to $176 million. Shaw continues to deliver strong results, and thus we reiterate our expectation for $1.40 in earnings-per-share for this fiscal year after a significant increase in YoY EPS to date.

In the quarter the company also completed the sale of all 80.6 million of its shares of Corus Entertainment Inc. for net proceeds of roughly $526 million. At the time the company had 38% ownership of Corus Entertainment.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Shaw's earnings-per-share history is a bit lumpy and over the long run, it has not produced much in the way of growth. However, we see current strategic initiatives mentioned above driving outsized earnings growth in the coming years. In total, we are forecasting 6.5% earnings-per-share growth annually moving forward.

These gains will come from continued revenue growth mostly, as the company's margins have been roughly flat for several years. Revenue gains will come from the company's growing user base as well as Shaw's ability to boost average revenue per user, as was the case so far in 2019. Recently announced retail partnerships with Loblaws and Walmart – chains with huge amounts of foot traffic – should help Shaw deliver high rates of revenue growth in the coming years. While we are forecasting stronger growth than what Shaw has historically been able to produce, the company seems to have turned the corner. Fiscal 2019 will see capex lower by about $200 million, which will help drive free cash flow above $500 million. In addition, management guided for $135 million in cost savings this year, helping to drive earnings and free cash flow higher.

With recent years' dividends exceeding earnings, we believe management will be a bit more cautious with dividend increases in the next few years. However, Shaw's yield is already high to make up for lower growth.

Valuation Analysis

| Year | 2009 | 2010 | 2011 | 2012 | 2013 | 2014 | 2015 | 2016 | 2017 | 2018 | Now | 2024 |
|-----------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|
| Avg. P/E | 16.1 | 16.3 | 13.5 | 12.5 | 14.2 | 14.0 | 15.9 | 27.4 | 24.9 | 18.9 | 19.3 | 16.0 |
| Avg. Yld. | 4.1% | 4.3% | 4.3% | 4.8% | 4.4% | 4.2% | 4.1% | 4.7% | 4.3% | 4.8% | 4.6% | 5.6% |

Shaw's valuation has moved around a lot in the past decade and today sits at 19.3 times our 2019 earnings-per-share estimate. While Shaw's valuation multiple has grown due to its entrance into the Canadian Wireless business, it still depends heavily on its consumer wireline business, so we estimate a fair value of 16 times earnings. That implies that Shaw is currently overvalued and should produce a 3.7% headwind to total annual returns as a result. We see a modestly higher payout and lower valuation combining to send the yield significantly higher in the coming years.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

| Year | 2009 | 2010 | 2011 | 2012 | 2013 | 2014 | 2015 | 2016 | 2017 | 2018 | 2019 | 2024 |
| Payout | 66% | 70% | 57% | 60% | 62% | 59% | 65% | 129% | 107% | 118% | 86% | 71% |

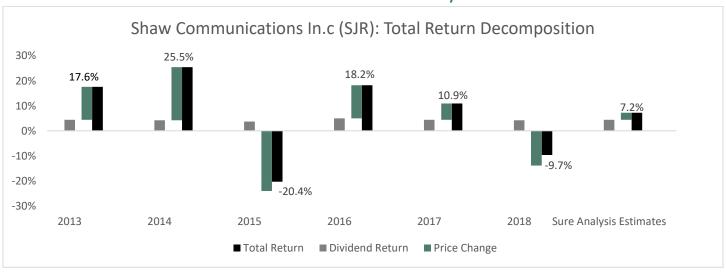

Shaw's quality metrics have stabilized after some meaningful declines in margins. We see margins as remaining flat moving forward, congruent with the last few years. Debt has come down off of much higher levels and today, Shaw's balance sheet leverage is quite low by telecommunications company standards. Interest coverage is more than sufficient and while the payout ratio is very high, we believe it will come down over time as earnings growth outpaces that of the payout.

Shaw's competitive advantage is in its leadership position in Western Canada, as well as its partnerships with Loblaws and Walmart. Indeed, we see these factors as driving growth for years to come. It is not immune to recession but telecommunications companies like Shaw tend to hold up very well, and we think this will remain the case.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Shaw is currently overvalued, despite its robust growth prospects and high yield, it trades at 121% our estimated fair value. We see total annual returns of 7.2% in the coming years, consisting of a 4.4% yield, 6.5% earnings-per-share growth, and a 3.7% headwind from the valuation. While Shaw offers investors a high yield, the risk due to valuation is slightly greater and could render it null. We rate Shaw Communications a hold.
