Overview & Current Events

Computer Services provides regional banks with a wide range of services, such as core processing, digital banking, payments processing, and regulatory compliance solutions. It has a market cap of $1.1 billion.

On April 1st, the company declared a two-for-one stock split. We have thus adjusted the figures in the tables below accordingly.

In early July, Computer Services reported (7/8/2019) financial results for the first quarter of fiscal 2020. The company grew its sales and its earnings-per-share by 6% and 25%, respectively, over last year's quarter thanks to higher sales of core processing, digital banking, regulatory compliance services and managed services. Computer Services enjoys strong business momentum thanks to the addition of new core customers, who have signed contracts with an average duration above 9 years, and expansion in new geographic markets. The company posted record revenues and earnings in the quarter and management expects the strong business momentum to remain in place for the foreseeable future.

Shares	30.2	29.8	29.6	29.4	28.8	28.4	28.2	28.0	28.0	27.8	27.6	26.5

Computer Services has grown its sales, its earnings and its dividend for 19, 22 and 48 consecutive years, respectively. Thanks to strong business momentum, management expects to post new all-time highs in the above metrics in this fiscal year.

Computer Services has grown its earnings-per-share at a rate between 5% and 7% in each of the last five years, excluding the last two years, which benefited from a large decrease in the tax rate. Thanks to accelerated growth in recent quarters, we have raised our forecast for this year's earnings-per-share from $1.73 to $1.90 and our assumed annual earnings-per-share growth rate for the next five years from 6.0% to 7.0%.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2009	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	Now	2025
Avg. P/E	9.9	12.6	16.6	19.1	16.9	18.0	20.6	17.4	20.4	16.7	21.6	16.8

Since the end of last year, Computer Services has dramatically outperformed the market, with a 71% rally (vs. 16% for The S&P 500). As a result, the stock is currently trading at a price-to-earnings ratio of 21.6, which is much higher than its 10-year average of 16.8. If the stock reverts to its average valuation level in the next five years, it will incur a 4.9% annualized drag due to contraction of its price-to-earnings ratio.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2025
Payout	25.2%	25.5%	27.3%	30.1%	32.4%	38.6%	45.4%	48.0%	50.2%	44.6%	44.2%	42.1%

The impressive growth record of Computer Services is a testament to the strength of its business model and the existence of a significant competitive advantage. The company signs multi-year contracts with its customers and offers them a wide range of services. It is thus very costly and inefficient for these customers to stop working with the company, particularly given that they pay appreciable early termination fees. As a result, Computer Services enjoys high renewal rates. In fact, when it loses a customer, the most frequent reason is that the bank has been acquired by another bank that is not a customer of Computer Services.

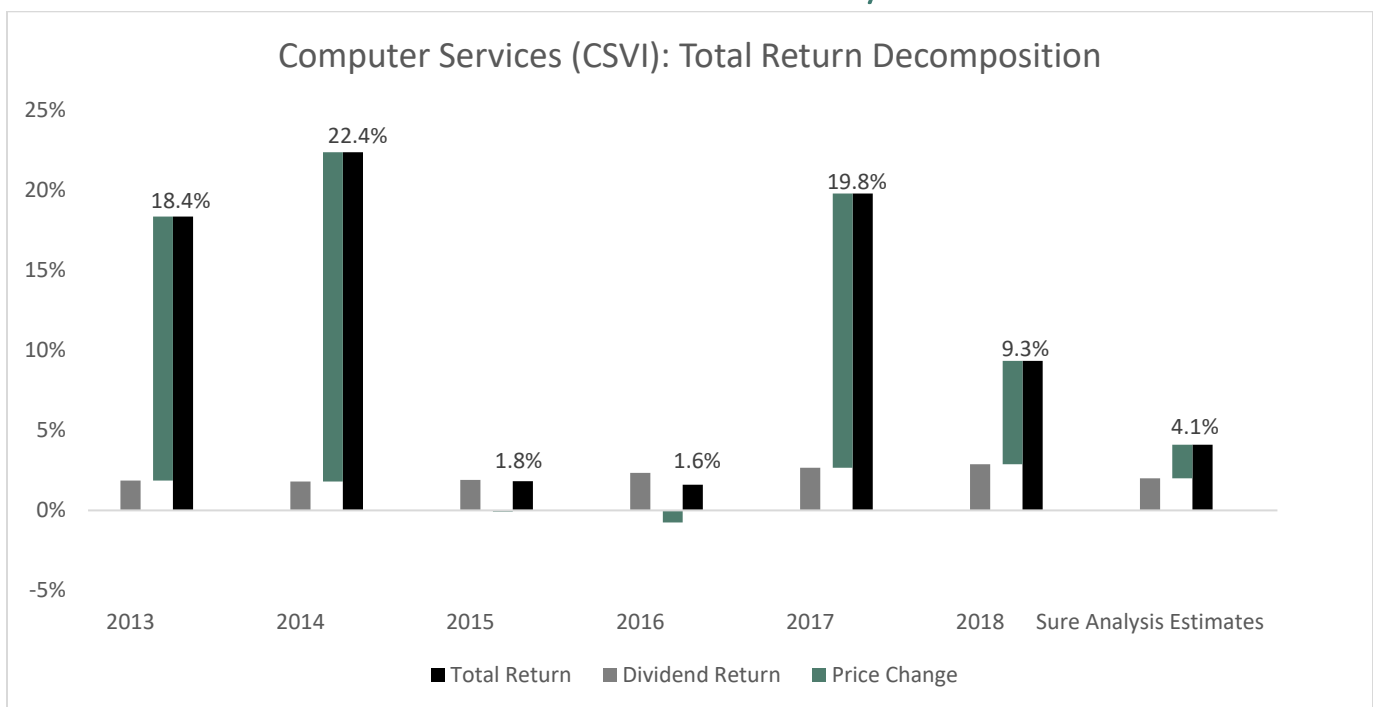

Computer Services does not carry any debt. Instead it has a net cash position of $9 million. Thanks to its strong balance sheet and healthy payout ratio, the company can easily keep growing its dividend at a meaningful pace.

Finally, thanks to its long-term contracts and the recurring nature of its revenues, Computer Services is resilient during recessions. In the Great Recession, it grew its earnings-per-share by 17% in 2008 and another 19% in 2009. On the other hand, its price-to-earnings ratio could steeply decline in a recession and the stock price would plunge, just like it did in the Great Recession, when it lost half of its market cap in a year. Nevertheless, those who can focus on the underlying performance and ignore the stock price gyrations are likely to see the stock rebound after an economic downturn.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Since it bottomed at the end of last year, the stock has enjoyed an impressive 71% rally, primarily thanks to accelerated earnings growth. While Computer Services has an exceptional growth record and continues to grow without any signs of fatigue, the stock has become richly valued. As a result, it may offer just a 4.1% average annual return over the next five years. We thus rate it as a sell at current prices, despite its high quality.
