Overview & Current Events

The Travelers Companies was founded in 1864 in Hartford, CT by two local businessmen. The company began with life and accident insurance but has expanded into various other types of coverage in the 150+ years since then. Today, it enjoys $29 billion in annual revenue and a $39 billion market capitalization. The company offers a wide and deep variety of protection products for auto, home and business customers. It is also a member of the Dow Jones Industrial Average, making it the only property casualty insurance provider in the prestigious index.

Travelers reported Q2 earnings and results missed expectations, causing us to slightly lower our estimates for this year. Total revenue was up 5% thanks mostly to a 4% rise in net written premiums. The rise in net written premiums to $7.45 billion was another record for Travelers on that metric, and reflected growth in all segments. The company's consolidated combined ratio was 98.4% in Q2, which rose from the year-ago period due to higher non-catastrophe weather losses.

Travelers returned $593 million to shareholders in Q2, which included $376 million in share repurchases. Travelers is famous for its buyback program that has seen the share count cut in half in just the past decade. The company has spent $797 million thus far this year on buybacks. The buyback has been a key component of the company's earnings-per-share growth over time and was once again in Q2 as the share count was 3% lower year-over-year.

Adjusted book value is now $90.05 per share, up 3% from the end of 2018 as Travelers continues to generate economic value for shareholders.

Core earnings-per-share came in at $2.02 in Q2, which was up from $1.81 in the year-ago period, but missed consensus of $2.30. As a result, we've removed a quarter from our earnings-per-share estimate for 2019, to $10.75.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2009	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2024
EPS	$6.32	$6.31	$3.25	$6.21	$9.46	$10.56	$10.87	$10.13	$7.27	$8.94	$10.75	$14.39
DPS	$1.26	$1.44	$1.64	$1.79	$1.96	$2.15	$2.38	$2.68	$2.83	$3.03	$3.28	$5.00
Shares	520	435	393	377	354	322	296	280	271	264	260	235

After strong growth coming out of the Great Recession, Travelers has failed to regain its 2015 high of $10.87 in earnings-per-share. However, we believe Travelers will get close to that number this year. In total, we are expecting 6% earnings-per-share growth annually in the coming years, following a much higher rate of growth for 2019.

Travelers can achieve this growth primarily from higher underwritten premiums and the buyback program, although margins should play a part as well, as long as there aren't any large catastrophes. We see low single-digit gains from higher revenue as well as a similar tailwind from the company's buyback, which has reduced the float by more than half in just the past decade alone. Recent reductions have been smaller in size given the higher share price, but Travelers is committed to reducing its share count over time. Lower operating expenses should also provide a bit of a boost to earnings, but the Travelers story really is about higher premiums, lower catastrophe losses, and a lower share count. Q2 results were negatively impacted by weather-related losses, and this will always be an unpredictable and significant risk for Travelers. As mentioned, we've lowered estimates for 2019 due to this factor.

The dividend has been raised in the mid-single digit range annually and we expect that will continue for the foreseeable future. Travelers is not a pure income stock any longer given the higher share price, but its 2.2% yield is respectable, and the payout should continue to grow at a quicker pace than earnings.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2009	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	Now	2024
Avg. P/E	7.0	8.2	17.4	10.3	8.8	8.8	9.7	11.2	17.2	14.7	13.8	11.0
Avg. Yld.	2.8%	2.8%	2.9%	2.8%	2.3%	2.3%	2.3%	2.4%	2.3%	2.3%	2.2%	3.2%

Travelers' price-to-earnings multiple has mostly stayed under 10 for the past decade but today, stands at 13.8. We therefore see the stock as overvalued given that our estimate of fair value is 11 times earnings. That implies a meaningful 4.4% headwind to total returns due to the valuation.

The yield is below its prior historical lows at 2.2%, but we see the stagnating share price and rising dividend combining to send the yield to 3.2% in five years. The significant overvaluation in the shares is also a negative for the yield.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Payout	19%	22%	48%	28%	21%	20%	22%	25%	38%	34%	31%	35%

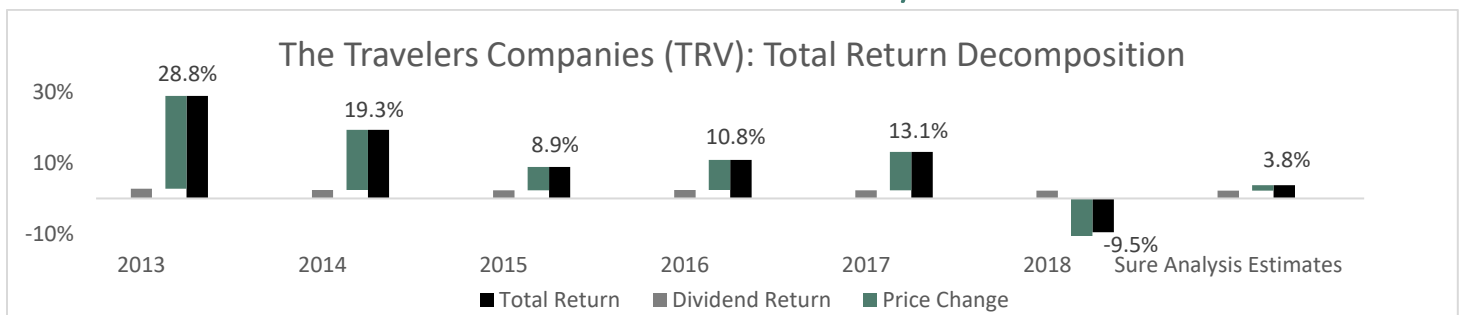

Travelers continues to be conservatively-financed and does not have significant debt coming due in the next three years, so its balance sheet is in good shape and interest coverage remains robust. We believe the payout ratio should remain in the low-30% area given that we are forecasting earnings and the dividend to grow at roughly congruent rates. The dividend is, therefore, very safe and we see many more years of increases on the horizon. Importantly, this continues to allow Travelers to buy back hundreds of millions of dollars of its own shares annually.

Travelers' main competitive advantages are in its immense scale and recognizable brand. Its size allows it to underwrite policies that others would not be able to and its brand is well-known from its long history. Travelers is more susceptible to catastrophes than recessions, as we saw in 2017 and again in 2018. This makes Travelers a defensive play should the economy weaken materially.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Travelers looks like a safe financial services provider with a decent growth outlook that is trading slightly above fair value. We see total annual return potential of just 3.8% annually in the coming years, consisting of the current 2.2% yield, 6% earnings-per-share growth and a 4.4% headwind from movement in the valuation. The valuation has continued to rise, reducing the attractiveness of the stock. Results continue to improve, but we believe most of this is already priced into the stock. We're moving Travelers from a hold to a sell recommendation given the high valuation, as we think investors should wait for a price closer to fair value before initiating a position.
