Overview & Current Events

MPLX, LP is a master limited partnership that was formed by the Marathon Petroleum Corporation (MPC) in 2012. The business operates in two segments: Logistics and Storage – which relates to crude oil and refined petroleum products – and Gathering and Processing – which relates to natural gas and natural gas liquids (NGLs). The $26 billion limited partner generated $2.7 billion in distributable cash flow in 2018.

On July 30th, 2019 MPLX completed the acquisition of Andeavor Logistics LP.

On October 25th, 2019 MPLX announced a 6.3% year-over-year quarterly distribution increase to $0.6775 per unit, equating to $2.71 on an annual basis. This marks the 27th consecutive quarterly distribution increase from the company.

On October 31st, 2019 MPLX released Q3 2019 results for the period ending September 30th, 2019. For the quarter Net Income equaled $629 million, compared to $510 million previously. Distributable Cash Flow (DCF) equaled $1.027 billion (~$1.05 per unit) compared to $766 million (~$0.96 per unit) in Q3 2018. Note that the substantially higher Distributable Cash Flow came with a substantially higher unit count as well, due to the Andeavor acquisition. MPLX ended the quarter with an adjusted distribution covered ratio of 1.42x and a consolidated debt to adjusted EBITDA ratio of 4.0x compared to 3.8x in Q3 2018.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Ideally you would use distributable cash flow (DCF) as a leading metric for a master limited partnership, but MPLX's DCF history is skewed by the general partner's (GP) incentive distribution rights (IDRs). In February of 2018 the parent company, Marathon Petroleum Corporation, dropped down assets and exchanged its GP interest, including IDRs, for a larger portion of MPLX (MPC's interest now equals 64%). Moving forward this should make the reporting clearer, but for now we have elected to show historical cash flow per share (which is not a perfect measure either). For 2018 (and moving forward) we have started to report DCF.

In general, pipelines tend to have a stronghold in terms of extracting economic rents. And natural gas is cleaner than coal. In the last decade, natural gas has overtaken coal as the leading source of electricity generation in the U.S. Building pipelines requires years of approvals and ongoing regulation. As such, the incumbent positions enjoy "toll-booth" type business models, with a good portion of their revenue fixed via fee-based and "take or pay" agreements. MPLX in particular has a strong position in the Marcellus / Utica region, with long-term contracts from Marathon. We are forecasting 3% annual growth moving forward, which may change depending on how the recent Andeavor acquisition is integrated. Note that the unit count has jumped substantially as a result of the transaction.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2009	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	Now	2024
Avg P/CF	---	---	---	13.6	25.9	34.3	49.8	24.4	14.3	8.3	6.8	8.0
Avg. Yld.	---	---	---	0.6%	3.2%	2.5%	3.1%	6.5%	6.3%	8.2%	10.3%	8.1%

MPLX does not lend itself to a nice average historical valuation, especially with both the cash flow per share and share price jumping around significantly in the last seven years. To alleviate this valuation problem, we are thinking about the security's value proposition in a couple of ways.

With the elimination of the IDRs, the cash available to unit holders should be a more accurate reflection of value moving forward. We believe something around 8 to 10 times expected distributable cash flow (DCF), implying a 10% to 12.5% shareholder yield, with the possibility for growth is a reasonable starting place for MLP securities. Against the current mark of 6.8 times DCF, shares appear reasonably compelling, even against the low end of this range.

A second way to think about valuation is based on the security's distribution yield. Here we believe something in the 6% to 8% range is attractive, with MPLX currently sitting above that range. Note that the distribution growth rate has been slowing recently, with management's intention of increasing the payout by a penny per quarter.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2009	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2024
Payout	---	---	---	8%	68%	66%	230%	143%	89%	68%	69%	65%

MPLX's industry generally holds competitive advantages as a result of the toll-booth model of pipelines. While growth potential may be limited, the need for the company's infrastructure is certainly present.

With MPLX in particular we are encouraged by the company self-funding on the equity side and getting rid of the IDRs. In the 2016 through 2018 stretch, MPLX had a distribution coverage ratio of 1.23x, 1.28x and 1.36x respectively. This quarter it came in at 1.42x. The company's total debt to adjusted EBITDA was 3.1x in 2016, 3.7x in 2017 and 3.9x in 2018 and 4.0x to end Q3 2019 (generally MLP's are shooting for a ratio under 5x). In addition, MPLX's revenues are quite steady given the Marathon parent relationship and long-term contracts.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Shares are down -13% since our last report. While we are cautious with the anticipated growth rate and note the MLP structure for tax purposes, the dividend yield and valuation look attractive. Total return potential comes in at 13.8% per annum, stemming from the 10.3% dividend yield, 3% growth rate and a valuation tailwind. We view the business model as compelling. It will be important to watch the company's quality metrics, too much debt can stymie the investment thesis, but otherwise MPLX offers a solid combination of attractive qualities. We continue to rate shares as a buy.
