Overview & Current Events

From its somewhat inauspicious beginnings as a Washington, D.C. root-beer stand in 1927, Marriott has become an international hospitality juggernaut, with more than 7,000 properties operating under 30 brands in more than 130 countries and territories. In fact, it's the largest hotel chain in the world.

The Marriott Intl. that we know today was created in 1993 when the former Marriott Corp. split into two publicly traded companies, Marriott Intl. and Host Marriott Corp. (HST) (now known as Host Hotels & Resorts). Marriott Intl. manages and franchises a portfolio of hospital brands that range from the classic splendor of The Ritz-Carlton to the Fairfield Inns you find along the highway. Internationally, Marriott's Starwood subsidiary gives the company a significant foothold in Europe and elsewhere.

Marriott currently boasts a market cap north of $39 billion. The company pays out a quarterly dividend that has hovered around 1.3%-1.5% during the past few years.

The company lost some goodwill in 2018 when it revealed its Starwood guest reservation database had been hacked. U.K. authorities have reported they will levy a $126 million fine on the company for the breach.

Marriott Intl. held its most recent earnings call on February 26, 2020. In the fourth quarter of 2019, adjusted net income grew 4% year-over-year, to $517 million. Marriott's full-year 2019 adjusted diluted earnings per share (EPS) totaled $3.80, compared to $5.38 in fiscal 2018.

Marriott also reported that for the full-year 2019, it repurchased 17.3 million of its shares for a total of $2.3 billion, including 3.1 million shares for $432 in the fourth quarter.

Despite Marriott Intl.'s large size, the company continues to grow at a relatively brisk pace. The company expects continued growth in the number of new projects using Marriott's 30 brands. Across the hospitality industry, luxury lodging continues to be a strong trend. Marriott currently has more than 700 luxury properties open or under development, with 60% of 200 luxury pipeline properties already under construction. The company also expects to grow in the trendy and growing all-inclusive space. Marriott is working to expand its all-inclusive portfolio not only in North and South America and the Caribbean, but also in Europe and Southeast Asia.

The company is wise in seeking opportunities beyond the typical hotel stay in response to homestay platforms such as Airbnb. The hospitality industry as a whole has to "up its game" to stay competitive. This is also where Marriott's pioneering loyalty program, Bonvoy, will come into play by offering attractive rewards.

However, there's no denying that, despite growth prospects, there's plenty of challenge in the industry. Currently, the biggest difficulties are related to fears of the coronavirus. China is Marriott's fastest-growing market, and the hospitality chain has already seen a significant drop in demand for hotel rooms in that country. And that pain isn't limited to travelers to China -- the massive number of Chinese travelers from the country to destinations worldwide has plummeted. And as the outbreak sweeps around the globe, it's likely all worldwide tourism will be affected as well.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2025
Avg. P/E	29.5	25.4	21.5	21.1	25.0	24.0	26.3	19.6	24.0	22.0	21.0	23.0
Avg. Yld.	0.6%	1.1%	1.3%	1.5%	1.2%	1.3%	1.7%	1.3%	1.2%	1.4%	1.5%	1.3%

Looking at Marriott's performance during the last 10 years, we notice the P/E has tended to remain solidly in the 21-25 range. Given this year's sluggish performance, we can conservatively expect MAR's 2019 P/E to hang below 23.

Looking ahead to 2025, we'll assign an expected P/E of 23, given the continuing challenges in the hospitality industry.

When it comes to dividend payouts, Marriott has a history of playing it slow but steady. We see this trend continuing for the foreseeable future.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2025
Payout	18%	29%	28%	32%	30%	30%	43%	25%	19%	31%	31%	31%

Although Marriott Intl. trades in excitement – luxury getaways, exotic destinations, and even room amenities that might trick you out of believing you're on business travel – the company's stock performance has been anything but thrilling. The company's best advantage is its sheer size. At this point, if you're staying at a chain hotel anywhere in the world, there's a decent chance Marriott owns the brand.

During the first decade of the 21st century – which saw one of the greatest historical slumps in travel – Marriott remained profitable. The company used that time to develop new luxury brands and programs and found ways to trim the fat. The lowest EPS that the company clocked was in 2009, at $0.94. Thanks to the coronavirus, we're about to see another huge drop-off in tourism. Unfortunately, there's no way to tell how long or how serious this event will be. We'll have to wait to see how the panic pans out.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Marriott Intl. is facing challenges, including continued growth of alternative stay platforms such as Airbnb and now the coronavirus. With weak expected annualized total returns, we rate Marriott Intl. as a sell at current prices.
