Overview & Current Events

Morningstar was founded in 1984 as a way for investors to seek information about hundreds of popular mutual funds that was out of reach prior to the company's Sourcebook product. Since that time Morningstar has grown tremendously, serving about 9 million clients today. It produces just over $1 billion in annual revenue and a market capitalization of $6.3 billion.

Morningstar reported Q4 and full-year earnings on February 20th, and results were once again strong. Revenue was up 15.6% to $1.2 billion as organic revenue increased 8.4%. The balance was driven by acquisitions, and organic revenue would have risen 9.5% excluding the non-recurring benefit of a license amendment from 2018.

Reported operating income was down -12.1% to $189.6 million, but adjusted operating income declined -1.4%. Morningstar saw operating expenses increase 23% for the year as costs related to the DBRS acquisition contributed nearly half of the increase. These costs should not be recurring. The remaining increase of 12.1% was due to higher salaries, bonus expense, stock-based compensation, and facilities costs. Operating margin was 19.8% on an adjusted basis in 2019, down from 22.4% in the prior year.

Net income came to $152 million, or $3.52 per share, down from $183 million and $4.25 per share in 2018, respectively. Cash from operating activities increased 6.2% to $334 million and free cash flow was $254 million, up 6.6% year-over-year. We're out with an initial estimate of $4.00 per share in earnings for 2020.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Morningstar's earnings-per-share history is very strong considering the wide array of economic conditions that have existed in the past decade. The company saw a small dip in earnings at the height of the crisis in 2009 and there have been a couple of other small blips, but it has managed an average growth rate of 6%. We see this level of growth continuing moving forward, and are therefore forecasting 6% earnings-per-share growth for the coming years.

We think low- to mid-single-digit revenue growth and a bit of further margin growth potential make 6% earnings-per-share growth look feasible. This growth estimate is also dependent on the company's appetite for acquisitions moving forward. With that said, its long-term revenue and earnings growth includes many acquisitions over time, so we see this estimate as including some additional M&A that has not occurred yet. Morningstar's position in its niche is well established and we see its future as very bright looking forward. It also continues to experience tremendous success with its PitchBook and other licensed products, and the significant costs related to recent mergers should not recur in future years, which will also help boost margins.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	Now	2025
Avg. P/E	27.5	30.3	28.7	27.7	28.2	25.8	21.4	28.1	27.2	40.2	36.6	27.0
Avg. Yld.	0.1%	0.4%	0.9%	0.5%	1.0%	1.0%	1.1%	1.1%	0.9%	0.8%	0.8%	1.2%

Morningstar's average price-to-earnings ratio has been very high in the past decade as its trough value was 21.4, set in 2016. Investors have always been willing to pay a premium for this stock and that is not going to change. Morningstar, and other businesses like it with lucrative subscription models, tend to receive premium valuations due to their high rates of recurring revenue and superior profitability. However, today's price-to-earnings ratio of 36.6 is well in excess of our estimate of fair value, which we see as 27. That means the security could experience a -5.9% annual headwind to total returns as the valuation returns to more normalized levels. We see the yield as remaining around where it is today as the dividend keeps pace with earnings; Morningstar is not an income stock.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2025
Payout	3%	10%	25%	14%	27%	25%	24%	32%	24%	34%	30%	33%

Morningstar's payout ratio is not likely to significantly above 30% anytime soon, barring a major shift in capital allocation strategy, so we see the yield as staying around 1% for the foreseeable future. Certainly, management has been more interested in investing for future growth, and that strategy isn't going to change anytime soon.

Morningstar's competitive advantage is in its very long operating history in a niche of the investment world it helped create. The company's subscription service, particularly with its PitchBook product, is a key differentiator and we see it powering future growth for many years to come.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Overall, we see Morningstar as a stock with a strong moat but also one that has had a major run, making it less compelling at present. We are forecasting just 0.8% total annual returns moving forward, consisting of the current small yield, 6% earnings-per-share growth and a sizable headwind from the valuation resetting. Morningstar's future is very bright, but given the low expected returns, we are reiterating it at a sell rating.
