Overview & Current Events

ABB is a global provider of automation technologies and power solutions. The company operates in more than 100 countries and has four business units: Electrification Products, Robotics & Discrete Automation, Motion and Industrial Automation. ABB is incorporated in Switzerland, but domestic investors can initiate an ownership stake in the company through American Depositary Receipts that trade with a market capitalization of US$40 billion under the ticker ABB on the New York Stock Exchange.

In late April, ABB reported (4/28/20) financial results for the first quarter of fiscal 2020. Comparable revenues fell -7% and operating margins decreased in all the segments due to the impact of the outbreak of coronavirus, particularly in China. However, comparable orders rose 1% and adjusted earnings-per-share remained essentially flat, at $0.30, and thus exceeded analysts' consensus by $0.10.

On the other hand, the pandemic and the resultant global recession will have a much more severe impact on the results of ABB in the remainder of the year. As a result, ABB withdrew its guidance for the year and we lowered our earnings-per-share forecast for the full year from $1.15 to $0.40.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2025
EPS	$1.11	$1.38	$1.18	$1.23	$1.13	$0.87	$0.88	$1.25	$1.33	$1.24	$0.40	$1.48
DPS	$0.49	$0.68	$0.71	$0.72	$0.77	$0.75	$0.75	$0.76	$0.81	$0.79	$0.77	$0.81
Shares²	2283.5	2290.4	2295.9	2300.6	2314.7	2191.6	2138.7	2138.7	2135.0	2135.0	2130	2100.0

ABB's per-share growth in net income over the last decade has been far from compelling. Even worse, the company is now facing a fierce pandemic, which has caused a global recession. However, we expect the global economy to begin to recover from next year. Moreover, ABB has a number of current growth opportunities that lead us to believe its future performance will be stronger than its historical track record. The Electrification segment, which generates 46% of the total revenues of ABB, seems to have the most promising prospects thanks to strong demand in key segments, such as rail, data centers, wind and electric vehicle infrastructure. In order to calculate our expected 5-year total return, we have used the mid-cycle earnings-per-share of $1.16, which is equal to the 10-year average, instead of the depressed figure of this year. We expect 5% average annual growth of earnings-per-share over the next five years off mid-cycle earnings.

ABB Ltd. (ABB)

Updated April 29th, 2020 by Aristofanis Papadatos

ABB has traded at an average price-to-earnings ratio of 19.2 over the last decade. With that said, this sample includes several years (2014-2017) in which the stock traded with an elevated P/E ratio. We believe that fair value for a company of ABB's caliber lies somewhere around 16 times earnings. Based on mid-cycle earnings-per-share of $1.16, the stock is currently trading at a price-to-earnings ratio of 16.4 times underlying earnings power. If the stock trades at our estimated fair earnings multiple of 16.0 in five years from now, it will incur a -0.5% annualized drag in its returns.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2025
Payout	44.1%	49.3%	60.2%	58.5%	68.1%	86.2%	85.2%	73.8%	58.6%	63.7%	66.4%	54.7%

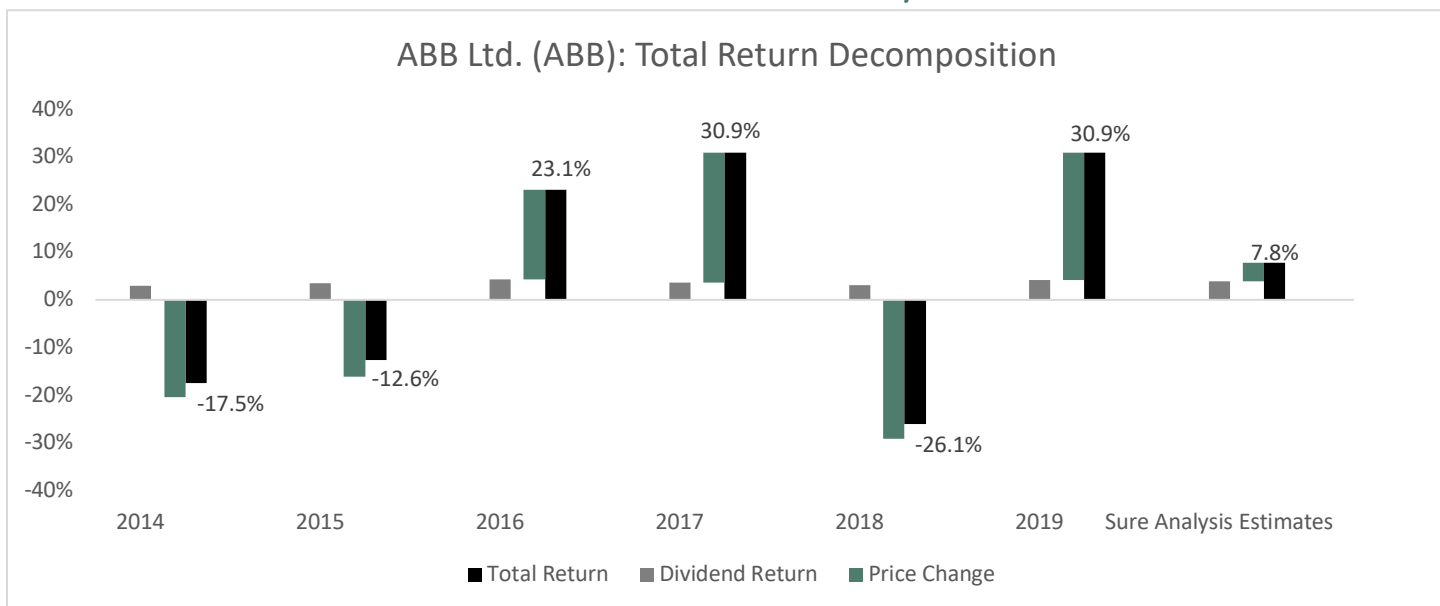

ABB has global businesses that are either the #1 or #2 player in attractive markets, with strong secular growth. The company expects its business markets to grow by 3.5%-4.0% per year on average over the long run. Thanks to its dominant position in its segments, ABB has a strong reputation and thus enjoys a significant competitive advantage over its peers.

Moreover, the company has a strong balance sheet, with its interest expense having consumed only 4% of its operating income in the last 12 months. On the other hand, the performance of ABB is greatly affected by economic growth and oil prices, which are beyond its control. Due to this vulnerability, the stock tends to underperform the market during sell-offs. Consequently, only investors who can tolerate significant price pressure should consider this stock.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

ABB has a variety of appealing characteristics. It is a global business with leadership in many segments of the industrial sector. However, it is highly vulnerable to the global recession, which has resulted from the coronavirus. This helps explain the recent -24% correction of the stock. Nevertheless, we view this downturn as temporary and expect the business of ABB to begin to recover from next year, along with the global economy. As a result, we expect the stock to offer a 7.8% average annual return over the next five years. With that said, the company has a markedly poor performance record, it is not recession resistant, and has an elevated chance of poor performance if the recession lasts longer than expected. We thus rate the stock as a hold.
