Overview & Current Events

Thomson Reuters Corporation is a global financial information and data solutions provider for businesses and professionals in the fields of finance, accounting, tax, and media. Thomson Reuters was created in 2008 when the Thomson Corporation purchased the British company Reuters Group. Thomson Reuters is cross listed in Toronto and New York, where it trades under the ticker TRI on both exchanges. Thomson Reuters is a rare example of an international company that trades on an American stock exchange and reports financial results in U.S. dollars. Accordingly, all figures referenced in this report are in USD and refer to the company's NYSE-listed common equity.

Thomson Reuters reported first quarter earnings on May 5th, and revenues grew 2% to $1.52 billion. The majority of total revenue (77%) is recurring revenues. Diluted earnings per share increased by 95% from $0.20 to $0.39. However, on an adjusted basis, EPS increased 33% to $0.48 from $0.36. Adjusted EBITDA grew 21% to $480 million, while Adjusted EBITDA margins increased 490 basis points to 31.6%. Cash flow from operations were positive $176 million compared to a $30 million loss in the prior year. The company repurchased $200 million of shares under its normal course issuer bid for 2020. They do not expect to repurchase more of their own shares in the near term, likely until clarity on the impact of COVID-19 is better understood.

The company announced in August 2019 that it agreed to sell Refinitiv to the London Stock Exchange Group (LSEG) in an all share transaction for a total enterprise value of approximately $27 billion. Thomson Reuters owns 45% of Refinitiv, with the remaining owned by Blackstone. By the end of the transaction, TRI would own 82.5 million shares of LSEG worth approximately $7.6 billion based on LSEG's closing share price on May 4, 2020. It remains expected to close in the second half of 2020.

As Thomson Reuters generates most of their revenue from selling information and software solutions electronically and on a subscription basis, the business has historically been resilient, and it should be this time too through COVID-19, however it is not immune. Thomson was one of the few companies providing an updated outlook for 2020 and is now expecting total revenue growth of 1% to 2%, down from prior expectations of 4.5% to 5.5%. Capex and corporate costs are unchanged. Capex will be around 8% of revenue, and corporate costs of $145 million is significantly lower than the $564 million spent last year.

This will be the final year that Thomson Reuters works in separation of its business and will contain clean reporting with no additional one-time costs related to the Refinitiv separation. The company is targeting roughly 5% growth in the medium-term and expects this will be sustainable. They hold roughly $820 million in cash to target acquisitions that strengthen the value proposition; however, they may hold this money now for liquidity purposes. They will also invest in their digital platforms with AI and machine learning technology and integrate with a cloud-based ecosystem while simplifying the buying, renewal and upgrading processes for clients.

In addition, the company has made it clear that share repurchases are a priority, which will help drive earnings-per-share higher as well. Finally, the transaction with LSEG should prove fruitful as LSEG has a healthy track record of earnings growth. Between 2020 and 2025, we expect Thomson Reuters to grow its earnings-per-share by 5% annually. This year will provide some much-needed clarity on what Thomson Reuters' business will look like post-Refinitiv.

Valuation Analysis

| Year      | 2010 | 2011 | 2012 | 2013 | 2014 | 2015 | 2016 | 2017 | 2018 | 2019 | Now  | 2025 |
|-----------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|
| Avg. P/E  | 21.4 | 16.8 | 13.5 | 24.4 | 21.8 | 23.9 | 29.9 | 23.2 | 64.4 | 8.88 | 38.6 | 22.0 |
| Avg. Yld. | 3.1% | 3.6% | 4.5% | 3.5% | 3.3% | 2.6% | 2.5% | 2.4% | 3.2% | 2.4% | 2.2% | 3.5% |

We see fair value for this stock at 22 times earnings and today, shares trade for 38.6 times earnings, significantly higher than the 10-year average of 25. We therefore see a significant 10.6% headwind to total returns annually as the valuation moderates over time. The stock has rallied strongly since 2019 and that has caused it to become overvalued. A moderating valuation should see the yield rise over time as the dividend increases.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

| Year   | 2010 | 2011 | 2012 | 2013 | 2014 | 2015 | 2016 | 2017 | 2018 | 2019 | 2020 | 2025 |
| Payout | 66%  | 60%  | 61%  | 84%  | 71%  | 63%  | 76%  | 55%  | 185% | 46%  | 87%  | 77%  |

Qualitatively, Thomson Reuters' strongest competitive advantage is its brand recognition, which provides it with strong pricing power in the competitive world of financial information. The company's payout ratio appears to be quite safe, and we see little risk in a dividend cut for the foreseeable future. The company has proven it is much more interested in investing for future growth, as well as buying back its own shares, than it is in becoming a dividend growth story. However, the current yield is adequate. TRI was founded during the last recession, so it is difficult to know exactly how much its business was impacted. However, since over 75% of revenues are subscription-based, the company has some built-in defense to the current pandemic. Management claims no changes to the plan to pay the annualized dividend.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

We see total returns for Thomson Reuters coming in negative at -3.2%, entirely due to an expected negative unwinding of the valuation level. The sale of the Financial & Risk business is a net positive, but the stock is near its high, and is thus already pricing in much of that benefit. We are maintaining our sell recommendation on Thomson Reuters given the lower-than-normal yield, and the unattractive valuation.
