Overview & Current Events

Universal Corporation is the world's largest leaf tobacco exporter and importer. The company is the wholesale purchaser and processor of tobacco that operates between farms and the companies that manufacture cigarettes, pipe tobacco, and cigars. Universal Corporation was founded in 1886 and is headquartered in Richmond, Virginia. With 49 years of dividend increases, Universal Corporation is a Dividend Champion.

Universal Corporation reported its fourth quarter (fiscal 2020) earnings results on May 27. The company generated revenues of $632 million during the quarter, which was 6% less than the revenues that Universal Corporation generated during the previous year's quarter. Management explains that revenues were partially impacted by weakening currencies in countries such as Brazil and Indonesia relative to the strengthening USD. Nevertheless, this revenue decline was much less severe compared to the revenue decline reported during the previous quarter.

Universal's adjusted earnings-per-share totaled $1.08 during the fourth quarter, which was down about 20% from the earnings-per-share that the company generated during the previous year's quarter. Profits were down due to the impact of lower sales during the quarter, coupled with some margin pressures on Universal's operations. The company generated adjusted earnings-per-share of $3.49 during fiscal 2020 and expects further pressures during fiscal 2021.

Universal Corporation's earnings-per-share during fiscal 2020 were lower than the earnings-per-share that Universal generated during fiscal 2010, a full decade earlier. There were some movements in Universal's earnings-per-share during the last couple of years, but without a clear direction. Earnings grew in some years and declined in other years, to essentially more or less offset each other. Overall Universal Corporation's results during the last decade were not convincing, as the company's track record in terms of earnings growth is weak.

As the leader in a declining industry, we do not expect the company to deliver strong business growth in the future. The company's earnings-per-share growth could still rise over the next couple of years, though. Universal Corporation's shares trade at a rather inexpensive valuation based on the earnings and cash flows that the company generates. Universal Corporation also does not need to invest meaningful amounts of money into its business, as the industry is not experiencing any meaningful growth anyways. This gives Universal Corporation the ability to utilize a substantial amount of its free cash flows for share repurchases. Through a declining share count, Universal Corporation should be able to deliver some earnings-per-share growth during the coming years. We believe that an annual earnings-per-share growth rate in the low-single-digits is possible for this tobacco corporation, largely due to the possibility of buybacks, despite the fact that its overall business will continue to trend down in the long run.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	Now	2026
Avg. P/E	7.9	13.0	10.6	10.5	12.5	14.3	16.3	16.0	13.0	12.6	13.8	11.0
Avg. Yld.	4.5%	4.6%	4.0%	3.7%	4.2%	4.0%	3.5%	3.4%	5.2%	6.9%	7.0%	8.5%

Universal Corporation traded at very low valuations during and following the last financial crisis, but shares became more expensive during the last couple of years. Today, shares trade at roughly 14 times fiscal 2021's net profits. This represents a discount versus how Universal Corporation's shares were valued in 2016-2018, but shares are still more expensive than our fair value estimate of 11 times its annual net profits, which is why we see some downside risk.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Payout	35.8%	59.7%	42.5%	38.5%	50.7%	53.6%	54.8%	49.7%	67.4%	87.1%	96.3%	93.9%

Universal Corporation has paid out roughly 50% of its net profits throughout most of the last decade, although there were significant swings both up and down during that time frame. The dividend increase in fiscal 2019, which was the result of management's strategic review and which lifted Universal Corporation's dividend by 36%, has made the dividend payout ratio jump to a significantly higher level. Coupled with earnings declines in 2020 and another forecasted decline in 2021, this has lifted Universal's dividend payout ratio to a rather high level. Management seemingly wants to continue to pay its dividend, and in fact, it has raised the payout by 1.3% just a couple of weeks ago.

Universal Corporation is active in an industry that has seen its peak. This means that its growth outlook on a company-wide basis is not positive. On the other hand, this means that there is no need for large investments, which results in relatively high free cash generation. The company also does not have to worry about new market entrants.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Universal Corporation does not have a convincing growth track record, but thanks to share repurchases the company could still generate at least some earnings-per-share growth going forward. Shareholders get an above-average dividend yield, but Universal still earns a sell recommendation at current prices, due to a valuation in excess of our fair value estimate, and due to the fact that the total return outlook is not very convincing.
