Overview & Current Events

Phillips 66 was spun off from ConocoPhillips in 2012. Phillips 66 has a market capitalization of $$ 27$ billion and operates in four segments: refining, midstream, chemicals, and marketing. It is a diversified company with each of its segments behaving differently under various oil prices, in the absence of a severe recession. When oil prices collapsed in 2014, the refining segment became by far the most profitable segment, as low oil prices improved demand for oil products and boosted refining margins. In 2019, the refining segment generated $48 \%$ of the total earnings of Phillips 66.

In late July, Phillips 66 reported (7/31/20) financial results for the second quarter of fiscal 2020. The company was severely affected by the pandemic, which caused a collapse in the demand for refined products and in the margins of all the segments of Phillips 66. The midstream, chemical and marketing segments saw their adjusted profits fall roughly $50 \%$ sequentially while the refining segment saw its loss more than double, from - $$ 401$ million to $-$ 867$ million. As a result, Phillips 66 switched from adjusted earnings-per-share of $$ 1.02$ in the first quarter to an adjusted loss per share of $-$ 0.74$. On the bright side, the company has somewhat increased its refinery utilization in the running quarter, from $75 \%$ in the second quarter to the low 80 s. Nevertheless, due to the sustained impact of the pandemic on the margins of all the divisions of Phillips 66, we have lowered our earnings-per-share forecast for the year from $$ 2.50$ to $$ 1.30$.

Growth projects in the oil industry take many years to start bearing fruit and hence there is a great lag between capital expenses and their resultant cash flows. Fortunately for the shareholders of Phillips 66 , the company is currently in the positive phase of its cycle. While it has greatly reduced its capital expenses in recent years, it has begun to reap the benefits from its huge investments in 2014 and 2015, when it invested a total of $$ 9.5$ billion. In addition, management is well known for its discipline to invest only in high-return projects.
The pandemic will greatly affect the results of Phillips 66 this year but we expect the company to recover from next year, along with the energy market. In order to calculate its future returns, we have used its mid-cycle ( 5 -year average) earnings-per-share of $\$ 7.03$ as a base. As soon as the pandemic subsides, Phillips 66 will greatly benefit from the new international marine standard (IMO 2020), which has forced vessels sailing in international waters to burn low-sulfur diesel instead of heavy fuel oil since January $1^{\text {st }}, 2020$. Diesel is much more expensive than fuel oil and hence refiners will enjoy a boost in their earnings. Phillips 66 also has many ongoing growth projects in its midstream segment. Moreover, while Phillips 66 has suspended share repurchases due to the pandemic, it will resume them when the economy recovers. Overall, we expect Phillips 66 to grow its earnings-per-share by $4.0 \%$ per year on average over the next five years off its mid-cycle level.

Phillips 66 is now trading at 8.8 times its mid-cycle earnings. This valuation level is lower than its 10-year average of 13.2. In order to be conservative, we assume a fair earnings multiple of 12.0 for this stock. If the stock approaches our fair value estimate within the next five years, it will enjoy a $6.4 \%$ annualized gain in its returns.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

| Year | $\mathbf{2 0 1 0}$ | $\mathbf{2 0 1 1}$ | $\mathbf{2 0 1 2}$ | $\mathbf{2 0 1 3}$ | $\mathbf{2 0 1 4}$ | $\mathbf{2 0 1 5}$ | $\mathbf{2 0 1 6}$ | $\mathbf{2 0 1 7}$ | $\mathbf{2 0 1 8}$ | $\mathbf{2 0 1 9}$ | $\mathbf{2 0 2 0}$ |
| :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: |
| Payout | -- | -- | $6.9 \%$ | $22.5 \%$ | $26.6 \%$ | $28.2 \%$ | $83.9 \%$ | $59.6 \%$ | $26.2 \%$ | $43.5 \%$ | $\mathbf{5 1 . 2 \%}$ |
| $\mathbf{5 1 . 2 \%}$ |  |  |  |  |  |  |  |  |  |  |  |

Phillips 66 has a significant competitive advantage, namely the discipline of its management to invest only in high-return projects. However, despite its diversified business, the company is cyclical, just like most oil companies. In the recent downturn of the oil sector, between mid-2014 and 2017, low oil prices resulted in high refining margins thanks to healthy underlying economic growth. However, in the Great Recession, the price of oil products plunged along with the price of oil and resulted in low refining margins. The current downturn is much fiercer than the recent downturn and hence it will greatly affect the results of Phillips 66, at least this year.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Phillips 66 is a well-managed company, which is properly positioned for most scenarios of oil prices, but it is now facing a severe downturn due to the coronavirus. Given the $-33 \%$ correction of the stock in the last two months and our expectations for a recovery of the company from next year, we expect the stock to offer a $14.7 \%$ average annual return over the next five years. We thus rate it as a buy for investors who can wait for the recovery of the energy market.
