Overview & Current Events

Xerox Corporation traces its lineage back to 1906 when The Haloid Photographic Company began manufacturing photographic paper and equipment. Through a series of mergers and spinoffs, the Xerox we know today was formed. Xerox spun off its business processing unit last year (now called Conduent) and now focuses on design, development and sales of document management systems. The company produces $7 billion in annual revenue and has a market capitalization of $3.5 billion.

Xerox reported second quarter earnings on July 28th, with revenue missing expectations, but earnings coming in ahead of consensus. Revenue declined -35% year-over-year as COVID-19-related weakness took a huge toll on the company's top line. Gross margins declined 60bps year-over-year, falling from 39.1% of revenue to 38.5%. However, because of a sizable amount of deleveraging due to the much lower top line, R&D deleveraged from 3.9% of revenue to 5.2%. The story was the same with SG&A costs, which deleveraged from 22.3% of revenue to 29.1% year-over-year.

As a result, operating income plunged -78% year-over-year to $62 million. As a percentage of revenue, operating margins fell from 12.4% to 4.2%. Earnings-per-share fell -81% to $0.15 year-over-year, reflecting much lower revenue and significant deleveraging of SG&A costs.

We've moved our earnings-per-share estimate to $1.30 as Xerox is struggling more than expected. We've also reduced our earnings power estimate to $2.60, which we use for fair value and valuation calculations.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Xerox's earnings-per-share have not moved around much in the past decade despite the volatile environment the company has operated in during that time. Xerox has had a difficult time growing revenue and profits and we do not see that changing moving forward. Indeed, we are forecasting no earnings-per-share growth for the next five years on the normalized earnings base of $2.60 per year. We're using this number for our fair value and valuation calculations as we believe COVID-19-related weakness should be transitory.

We think the revenue and margin outlooks for Xerox have deteriorated, but its buyback program should be able to help alleviate some of the burden when it comes to growth. Most of our earnings-per-share growth projection comes from the buyback program as revenue losses and margin gains largely offset each other. In other words, actual earnings growth will likely be tough to come by; we are counting on a meaningful share reduction for the coming years.

The dividend is $1 per share today and we do not see any increases coming anytime soon. The dividend was cut after the Conduent spinoff in 2017 and given the above, we do not see management taking the risk of a higher dividend.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	Now	2025
Avg. P/E	12.5	10.5	8.0	9.7	13.0	14.3	16.8	8.5	8.0	9.0	6.3	7.5
Avg. Yld.	1.7%	1.8%	2.3%	2.4%	2.0%	2.4%	3.2%	3.4%	3.6%	3.1%	6.1%	5.1%

Xerox's average price-to-earnings ratio in the past decade has been 11, but we are reiterating our estimate of fair value of 7.5 times earnings given continued revenue weakness, and because margins plummeted again in Q2. That is above the 6.3 times earnings power the stock trades for today, implying a tailwind to annual total returns should the valuation normalize over the next five years. We expect the stagnant dividend and higher valuation to produce a lower yield.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2025
Payout	22%	19%	18%	23%	26%	34%	54%	29%	29%	28%	39%	39%

The payout ratio is just 39% of normalized earnings and we don't see any meaningful movement from that in the coming years. The dividend should thus be somewhat safe, assuming the payout survives a very tough 2020.

Xerox will suffer during this recession as it serves a global customer base, some of which will also suffer during a downturn. Its competitive advantage is in its pure-play focus on document management systems and its very long history in the industry. In addition, it has a highly diversified, global customer base.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

In total, we see Xerox producing 8.5% annual total returns in the coming years, although there may be significant volatility in achieving those returns. The yield will contribute 6% as well as a tailwind from the valuation. We are reiterating Xerox at a hold rating as we continue to have significant concerns about the company's ability to generate revenue growth over time.
