Overview & Current Events

Universal Corporation is the world's largest leaf tobacco exporter and importer. The company is the wholesale purchaser and processor of tobacco that operates between farms and the companies that manufacture cigarettes, pipe tobacco, and cigars. Universal Corporation was founded in 1886 and is headquartered in Richmond, Virginia. With 49 years of dividend increases, Universal Corporation is a Dividend Champion.

Universal Corporation reported its second quarter (fiscal 2021) earnings results on November 5. The company generated revenues of $377 million during the quarter, which was 21% less than the revenues that Universal Corporation generated during the previous year's quarter. Management explains that revenues were down due to headwinds generated by the current pandemic, which has affected the purchasing behavior by some of Universal's customers. This is a reversal compared to the previous quarter, during which revenues had been up year over year.

Universal's adjusted earnings-per-share totaled $0.37 during the second quarter, which was down a lot from the previous year's quarter, as Universal had earned $1.14 during Q2 of fiscal 2020. Management believes that H2 of the current year will be when most of its profits will be generated, as the seasonal shift in 2021 is forecasted to be even bigger than usual, which means that profits will likely not be down this much on an annualized basis.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Universal Corporation's earnings-per-share during fiscal 2020 were lower than the earnings-per-share that Universal generated during fiscal 2010, a full decade earlier. There were some movements in Universal's earnings-per-share during the last couple of years, but without a clear direction. Earnings grew in some years and declined in other years, to essentially more or less offset each other. Overall Universal Corporation's results during the last decade were not convincing, as the company's track record in terms of earnings growth is weak.

As the leader in a declining industry, we do not expect the company to deliver strong business growth in the future. The company's earnings-per-share growth could still rise over the next couple of years, though. Universal Corporation's shares trade at a rather inexpensive valuation based on the earnings and cash flows that the company generates. Universal Corporation also does not need to invest meaningful amounts of money into its business, as the industry is not experiencing any meaningful growth anyways. This gives Universal Corporation the ability to utilize a substantial amount of its free cash flows for share repurchases. Through a declining share count, Universal Corporation should be able to deliver some earnings-per-share growth during the coming years. We believe that an annual earnings-per-share growth rate in the low-single-digits is possible for this tobacco corporation, largely due to the possibility of buybacks, despite the fact that its overall business will continue to trend down in the long run.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	Now	2026
Avg. P/E	7.9	13.0	10.6	10.5	12.5	14.3	16.3	16.0	13.0	12.6	14.7	11.0
Avg. Yld.	4.5%	4.6%	4.0%	3.7%	4.2%	4.0%	3.5%	3.4%	5.2%	6.9%	6.6%	8.5%

Universal Corporation traded at very low valuations during and following the last financial crisis, but shares became more expensive during the last couple of years. Today, shares trade at roughly 15 times fiscal 2021's net profits. This represents a discount versus how Universal Corporation's shares were valued in 2017-2018, but shares are still substantially more expensive than our fair value estimate of 11 times its net profits, which is why we see downside risk.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2026
Payout	35.8%	59.7%	42.5%	38.5%	50.7%	53.6%	54.8%	49.7%	67.4%	87.1%	96.3%	93.9%

Universal Corporation paid out roughly 50% of its net profits throughout most of the last decade, although there were significant swings both up and down during that time frame. The dividend increase in fiscal 2019, which was the result of management's strategic review and which lifted Universal Corporation's dividend by 36%, has made the dividend payout ratio jump to a significantly higher level. Coupled with earnings declines in 2020 and another forecasted, smaller decline in 2021, this has lifted Universal's dividend payout ratio to a rather high level. Management seemingly wants to continue to pay its dividend, as it raised the payout by 1.3% during the pandemic.

Universal Corporation is active in an industry that has seen its peak. This means that its growth outlook on a company-wide basis is not positive. On the other hand, this means that there is no need for large investments, which results in relatively high free cash generation. The company does not have to worry about competition from new market entrants.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Universal Corporation does not have a convincing growth track record, but thanks to share repurchases the company could still generate at least some earnings-per-share growth going forward. Shareholders get an above-average dividend yield, but Universal still earns a sell recommendation at current prices, due to a valuation in excess of our fair value estimate, and due to the fact that the total return outlook is not looking very convincing.
