Overview & Current Events

Lancaster Colony has been making food products since 1969, after shifting away from housewares. The move has afforded the company some meaningful growth in the past five decades and the stock sports a $4.8 billion market capitalization on $1.4 billion in annual revenue. Lancaster Colony makes various meal accessories like croutons and bread products in frozen and non-frozen categories. Lancaster also has one of the best dividend increase streaks in the entire market, with fiscal 2021 representing the 58th consecutive year of dividend increases.

Lancaster reported first quarter earnings on November 4th, 2020 with results coming in mixed, with revenue slightly ahead of expectations, but profits just under consensus. Net sales were up 3.6% to another record at $349 million. Organic net sales rose 5.2%. Retail net sales were up 17% to $194 million, while Foodservice revenue was down -9% to $156 million, as the continuation of pandemic grocery and restaurant behavior from consumers took its toll.

Gross profit was $93 million, up fractionally year-over-year. Heavier retail sales mix helped gross profit, but was offset by higher manufacturing costs, as well as commodity and freight cost increases. SG&A costs were up nearly $9 million to $48 million as the company is implementing a new ERP tool, as well as other IT infrastructure and consumer-facing promotions. Operating income was down $2.8 million to $48.9 million, driven by higher expenses and lower gross margin as a percentage of revenue. Net income was also down, to $37 million from $41 million in the same period last year. On a per-share basis, net income was $1.35, down from $1.48 in the same period last year.

We now expect $5.20 in earnings-per-share for this year, reflecting what would be moderate growth over fiscal 2020.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2026

DPS	$1.29	$1.41	$1.52	$1.72	$1.82	$1.96	$2.15	$2.40	$2.55	$2.75	$3.00	$3.83
Shares<sup>1</sup>	28	27	27	27	27	27	27	28	28	28	28	28

The company's earnings-per-share growth has been spotty as its revenue tends to ebb and flow with restaurant traffic. It recovered nicely from the Great Recession, but the drop in 2008 earnings was very steep.

We are forecasting 4% earnings-per-share growth annually ahead, comprised of low single-digit sales and flat margins. Lancaster does not buy back stock. The company's average revenue growth has been and should remain in the low single-digits, but keep in mind the possibility for earnings volatility going forward - there will be years where it dips and other years where it may rise rapidly, as it did in 2018, and again in 2019. Organic growth has been a problem for Lancaster Colony, but it does complete sizable acquisitions regularly. After a decline in earnings in 2020, we are forecasting a strong rebound in earnings to get Lancaster back to its former growth track for fiscal 2021. Organic growth was strong for the first quarter as the strength of the retail business more than offset weakness in foodservice.

We are forecasting modest dividend growth annually for the next five years as Lancaster Colony continues its impressive streak of payouts to shareholders; the payout could be $3.83 per share in five years. Lancaster is not a strong income stock, but it does prioritize growth in the payout each year, and that should continue. The company raised the dividend in November for the 58th consecutive year, boosting the payout by 7%.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	Now	2026
Avg. P/E	14.2	18.6	18.6	23.5	24.5	24.3	31.2	31.4	28.8	30.0	33.5	24.0
Avg. Yld.	2.4%	2.2%	2.0%	2.0%	2.0%	1.8%	1.6%	1.7%	1.6%	1.8%	1.7%	2.5%

The stock's price-to-earnings ratio has spent the past few years around 30, but given the company's exposure to restaurants, we see fair value at 24 times earnings. Today, shares trade for 33.5 times our fiscal 2021 earnings estimate, so we see it as very overvalued at present.

Due to a forecast decline in the valuation, we are expecting the yield to climb closer to 2.5%. The stock's dividend yield was nearly cut in half from 2009 to 2017 due to a huge rally, but some of that could be unwound in the coming years due to a lower projected valuation. We don't see Lancaster's fundamentals as able to support 33 times earnings.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Payout	29%	34%	40%	38%	47%	49%	44%	47%	47%	55%	57%	61%

Lancaster Colony's payout should remain near where it is today as dividend growth roughly matches earnings growth. Given its Dividend King status, we know the payout is important to management and the dividend is very safe.

Lancaster Colony's competitive advantage is in its leadership position within the niche categories in which it competes. The company goes after accessory categories like bread, dressings and croutons where competition tends to be lighter. It also has strong distribution partnerships with companies like Wal-Mart and McLane Company, a major restaurant distributor. Its recession performance track record is spotty because it is reliant upon restaurant traffic, something that suffers mightily during times of economic stress. Lancaster's first quarter results showed its exposure to restaurants once again, and while the retail business is booming, it still gets nearly half of its revenue from foodservice.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

We expect Lancaster Colony to provide shareholders with total annualized returns of -0.6% over the next five years as it continues to be very overvalued in our view. Investors seeking income may want to wait for a better price with a higher yield, and those seeking growth or value may simply look elsewhere. Overall, Lancaster Colony continues to earn a sell rating from Sure Dividend at current prices as we don't see a lot of positives in the stock today.
