Overview & Current Events

Banco Bradesco offers various banking products and financial services to individuals, corporations, and businesses in Brazil and internationally. The company's two main segments are banking and insurance, including checking and savings accounts, demand deposits, time deposits, as well as accident and property insurance products and investment products. The company generates around $20 billion in annual revenues and is headquartered in Osasco, Brazil. All financials have been converted to $US unless otherwise specified.

On February 3rd, 2021, Banco Bradesco reported its Q4 results for the period ending December 31st, 2021. For the quarter, the banking segment's net interest income was $3.09 billion, representing 5.6% growth YoY. However, amid losses in the insurance segment, the quarterly operating income ended up at $1.80 billion, 1% higher than the comparable period last year. The company's net income ended at $1.27 billion, a 2.3% increase compared to last year, or 35.2% quarter-over-quarter, which was a strong recovery from the previous results still affected by COVID-19. EPS for the quarter was $0.14, a 55.5% growth vs. Q4-2019 amid significant cost-cutting and higher commission fees. We expect the company to deliver FY2021 EPS of $0.50 amid growth in Banco Bradesco's customer base and cost-cutting, as displayed in the company's latest results. Results are likely to be relatively stronger, though we remain cautious due to the continuous depreciation of the Brazilian Real against the $US. We also expect FY2021 DPS of $0.20, reflecting the company's historical dividend policy.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Banco Bradesco's EPS has been improving consistently in constant currency but shown as flat or reduced over the years when converted in USD due to BRL/USD's depreciation. In Q4, the company reported it expanded its loan portfolio to $72 billion, a 10.3% growth YoY, or 3.4% QoQ. Additionally, its client base in its AGORA digital investment brokerage app grew by 11.6% to 547K, with $11.63 billion of invested funds. While we would typically price in positive growth in the company's EPS results, such growth could be wiped once again by FX changes.

Dividend payments are made on a monthly basis, which is quite rare for an international company. The company usually pays around $0.004 per share each month, accompanied by two special dividends per year, which define the final amount. It is worth noting that the company had consecutively grown its dividend annually from 2012 to 2019, but again, FX changes have distorted that amount.

Our $0.20 FY2021 DPS estimate reflects the company's historical tendency to pay out a little less than half of its net income. The company has already paid two $0.004 dividends for the months of January and February.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	Now	2026
Avg. P/E	16.9	16.1	15.1	16.2	11.7	10.8	12.1	13.5	13.2	11.8	9.5	10.0
Avg. Yld.	2.1%	2.3%	2.2%	2.1%	3.0%	3.7%	4.5%	3.9%	7.8%	3.5%	4.2%	4.0%

Banco Bradesco's historical P/E has remained quite consistent over the past decade, hovering in the mid-teens, averaging around 13.7. On the one hand, the company's growth in constant terms, as well as its monthly payouts, which provide rather predictable returns, point towards a valuation appreciation. On the other hand, the fact the company is based outside of the U.S. (governance and reporting issues), as well as the continuous weakening of the Brazilian Real, rightfully drags the valuation lower. We believe that a P/E around 10 reflects the overall risk/reward quite decently.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Payout	36%	37%	34%	34%	35%	40%	54%	53%	103%	39%	40%	40%

While Banco Bradesco's dividend is not consistent and will continue to vary based on the company's underlying results and FX changes, a base level (0.004/month) should be considered quite safe, being well-covered by the company's cash from operations. The company continued to pay its base monthly rate even under the Great Financial Crisis, despite its financials suffering along with the rest of its sector.

The company's Basel ratio currently stands at 15.8% (the minimum capital ratio banks must maintain to ensure solvency is 8%), which makes for a healthy capital structure. Liquidity coverage stands at 178.4%, also ample to ensure available funds if needed.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Banco Bradesco S.A. is a well-managed financial services company. In its original Sao Paulo listing, the stock has delivered investors positive returns over the years when valued in constant currency. However, for American investors, the company's underlying growth has been getting wiped out by the non-stop depreciation of BRL/USD – hence our neutral estimates. Our expected annualized returns come out at around 4.7%, powered by its monthly dividend and the possibility for a slight valuation expansion. Considering the currency risks involved, we require more substantial potential returns for the security to appear compelling. Shares earn a hold rating.
