Overview & Current Events

Donaldson has been creating filtration solutions for a wide array of applications since 1915. Its sales consist of filters in various engine and industrial applications as core categories, but continuous innovation and acquisitions have expanded the portfolio. The company is expected to produce about $2.7 billion in revenue this year and trades with a current market capitalization of $7.7 billion.

Donaldson reported second quarter earnings on February 25th, 2021 with results coming in mixed against expectations. Total sales were up 2.6% to $679 million from $662 million in the year-ago period. Engine Products were up 6.2%, reflecting strong results in off-road and aftermarket products, partially offset by aerospace and defense, as well as on-road products. Industrial Products sales declined -4.3%, driven by continued weakness in filtration systems due to lower demand for dust collection products. China was a bright spot, returning double-digit growth.

Gross margin came to 33.2% of revenue, down from 33.7% in the same period a year ago. However, 80bps of the decline was from restructuring costs, which are non-recurring. On an adjusted basis, gross margin rose 30bps to 34% of revenue, driven by lower raw material costs, partially offset by an unfavorable sales mix.

Operating expense as a percentage of sales was down 30bps on an adjusted basis, reflecting leverage from higher sales and the company's cost containment efforts.

Operating income was 13.4% of revenue on an adjusted basis, or +60bps year-over-year. We now see $2.20 in earnings-per-share for this year after Q2 results.

Donaldson's earnings growth has been inconsistent in the past decade as it is very much beholden to economic conditions around the world. Its customer base is diverse and deep, but growth seems to come in bunches, not in a steady fashion. Looking forward, we are forecasting robust 10% earnings-per-share growth annually, and a similar estimate for 2021. We remain somewhat cautious on the company's ability to grow revenue, as well as expand its margins despite recent pricing increases. However, management is bullish, seeing improvement on the horizon in the near-term, and recent results have been supportive of higher revenue and better margins, excluding COVID-19.

The company can grow through a variety of methods. First, sales increases ought to continue from organic growth, pricing increases, and acquisitions, which should amount to mid-single-digit or better growth. We see margin improvement activities as key to the company producing meaningfully higher earnings in the coming years, as well as a rebound in revenue producing leverage on SG&A costs.

Lastly, Donaldson is buying back stock each year. We forecast moderate dividend growth, but Donaldson is not a high-income stock, choosing instead to use its excess cash for acquisitions and share repurchases.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	Now	2026
Avg. P/E	19.1	19.2	21.7	23.1	25.5	21.9	24.9	23.9	24.7	24.2	27.7	24.0
Avg. Yld.	1.0%	1.0%	1.3%	1.5%	1.8%	2.2%	1.7%	1.6%	1.5%	1.7%	1.4%	1.5%

Donaldson's price-to-earnings multiple has been remarkably steady in the past decade. However, given where shares are today, we are forecasting a headwind to total returns as shares are still in excess of our estimate of fair value.

We are forecasting the yield to move up slightly in the years to come as the payout increases while the valuation moderates. This is not a stock one buys for the current yield, as the company's stated strategy requires the use of excess cash for acquisitions and buybacks.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Payout	18%	18%	24%	32%	44%	48%	41%	38%	38%	41%	38%	35%

Donaldson's payout ratio remains below 40% of earnings and we expect that is where it will stay for the foreseeable future. As mentioned, Donaldson prefers to use most of its excess cash for acquisitions and a small amount of share repurchases, but it does raise the dividend regularly.

Donaldson's recession performance is somewhat of an issue, as you'd expect for an industrial stock, and earnings will likely fall significantly during the next downturn. It does enjoy the competitive advantage of more than 100 years of experience in its field, as well as a strong history of innovation and a sizable installed customer base.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Donaldson looks attractive once again, thanks in part to strong earnings. The stock is still in excess of our estimate of fair value, which is crimping prospective returns. Still, we are forecasting total annual returns of 8.2%, consisting of the current 1.4% yield, a modest headwind from the valuation, and 10% earnings growth. The stock still offers investors growth potential, but the yield isn't good enough for income investors. We're reiterating Donaldson at a hold rating.
