Overview & Current Events

TELUS Corporation is one of the 'big three' Canadian telecommunications companies along with BCE, Inc. (BCE) and Rogers Communications (RCI). TELUS is focused in Western Canada and provides a full range of communication products and services through two business segments: Wireline and Wireless. TELUS is cross-listed on the Toronto Stock Exchange and the New York Stock Exchange, where it trades under the tickers 'T' and 'TU', respectively. TELUS reports financial results in Canadian dollars but all the figures in this report are in USD. The stock currently has a market capitalization of $26.7 billion. On March 17th, 2020, TELUS implemented a 2-for-1 stock split.

In mid-February, TELUS reported (2/11/21) financial results for the fourth quarter of fiscal 2020. The company grew its revenue by 5.2% thanks to client additions of 253,000 over the prior year's quarter. However, its adjusted earnings-per-share fell -31% due to the pandemic, which caused a steep decrease in wireless roaming revenue and increased the employee benefits and other costs of the company. TELUS was also hurt by the temporary shutdown of some of its retail stores and the restrictions imposed due to social distancing.

Telecommunications companies are largely protected from the coronavirus crisis but the shutdown of stores for a considerable period as well as social distancing restrictions continue to weigh on the results of TELUS. Management expects 8%-10% revenue growth and 6%-8% EBITDA growth this year.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

TELUS pays out the majority of its earnings as dividends, which leaves little in the way of retained earnings to invest for growth. Still, the company managed to grow its earnings-per-share by 3.6% per year during 2010-2019. Moreover, thanks to the strong momentum of the company in wireless and wireline additions and the low comparison base formed this year, we expect annual earnings-per-share growth rate of 8% over the next five years.

In terms of dividend payments, before the onset of the pandemic, TELUS had a publicly communicated target of 7%-10% annual dividend growth through 2022. We have assumed a much lower annual dividend growth rate (3%) over the next five years, in order to be on the safe side, given the ongoing downturn caused by the pandemic. This growth rate will keep the payout ratio within reasonable levels for a telecommunications company.

TELUS Corporation (TU)

Updated March 4th, 2021 by Aristofanis Papadatos

Excluding the outlier years 2016 and 2020, TELUS has traded at an average price-to-earnings ratio of 16.3 over the last decade, which we believe represents an approximation of fair value for this Canadian telecommunications corporation. The stock is currently trading at a price-to-earnings ratio of 22.1, which is a decade-high level, much higher than the historical average. If the stock reverts to its average valuation level over the next five years, it will incur a -5.9% annualized drag due to the contraction of its valuation level.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Payout	57.8%	59.2%	65.7%	64.1%	71.6%	87.4%	79.3%	76.9%	78.7%	106%	98.9%	78.1%

TELUS' main competitive advantage comes from being an entrenched player in a capital-intensive and highly regulated industry. Indeed, according to Canada's telecommunications regulator – the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commissions (CRTC) – the Top 5 telecommunications providers gather 85% of the industry's revenues. This discourages potential competitors from entering the market and is a competitive advantage for TELUS.

Due to the hefty capital expenses required in the telecommunications sector, the companies of this sector usually carry heavy amounts of debt. However, TELUS has a reasonable amount of debt, as its liabilities comprise less than three-quarters of its total assets while its interest expense consumes 27% of its operating income. At the security level, TELUS has traded with remarkably little stock price volatility since the 2007-2009 financial crisis. In the ongoing downturn, the volatility of the stock has increased but we view the business prospects of TELUS as fairly resilient to the current crisis.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

TELUS Corporation is one of Canada's largest telecommunications providers. The company's attractive dividend yield, its overall business stability and its resilience to recessions make it attractive for conservative, income-seeking investors. We expect the stock to offer a 5.8% average annual return over the next five years. We thus maintain our hold rating.
