Overview & Current Events

Silgan Holdings manufactures and sells metal and plastic containers, as well as packaging closures. Its containers are found in everyday food consumables such as pet food, fruits and vegetables, and drinks, while its closures are applied to the beverage, garden, and personal care products. The company generates nearly $5.0 billion in revenues and is based in Stamford, Connecticut.

On April 28th, 2021, Silgan reported its Q1-2020 results for the period ended March 31st, 2020. Quarterly revenues increased by 20.4%, reaching $1.24 billion. Adjusted EPS came in at a record $0.75, growing by 31.5% year-over-year. The company's impressive performance was attributed to metal containers once again seeing volume growth of 9% YoY, delivering $554.1 million in turnover (44.6% of sales) due to the increased at-home food consumption and favorable foreign currency translation. Closures delivered even more impressive numbers, reaching $509.3 million in sales, an increase of 42.6%. This was due to increased volumes from the dispensing operations of Albéa acquired in June 2020 and continued higher volume demand across products such as foamers and sprayers. Finally, custom containers enjoyed a 6.1% revenue increase to $147.7 million, also posting a satisfactory quarterly performance.

For FY2021, management reaffirmed its adjusted EPS to be in the range of $3.30 to $3.45, a 10.3% growth at the midpoint. Applying that growth rate to FY2020's normalized EPS (to exclude one-off EPS boosts), FY2021 normalized EPS should grow by slightly more than 10% to $3.07. Due to its excellent results, management raised the dividend by 16.6%, to a quarterly rate of $0.14.

Over the past decade, Silgan has averaged an EPS and DPS CAGR of 8.1% and 9.1%, respectively. As global lockdowns remain strong across the globe, demand for packaged and canned foods, as well as sanitization products, should remain robust. Amid the most recent quarter's explosive results and possibility for a medium-term margin expansion, we hike our EPS CAGR estimates at 9%. A potential decline in volumes caused by COVID-19 retreating and/or an oversupply of Silgan's products could slow down profitability growth. However, Silgan's sales growth momentum seems to be remaining consistent, challenging the scenario that its sales bump was only temporary. Further, we raise our DPS CAGR forecast from 8% to 10% to reflect management's latest bold payout hike due to a low payout ratio and a favorable business environment.

The company's buyback program remains active. However, no shares were repurchased during Q1. The company had bought back and retired nearly $36M worth of stock during FY2020, or nearly 1% of its shares outstanding, maintaining its capital return levels humble.

Valuation Analysis

|-----------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|
| Avg. P/E  | 16.9 | 16   | 16.8 | 17.1 | 19.9 | 20.1 | 22.6 | 11.1 | 17.6 | 12.5 | 13.7 | 14.0 |
| Avg. Yld. | 1.1% | 1.1% | 1.2% | 1.2% | 1.3% | 1.3% | 1.1% | 1.6% | 1.5% | 1.5% | 1.3% | 1.4% |

Silgan's valuation has remained relatively reasonable over the years, rarely outrunning its underlying financial growth. Based on the company's confident guidance, shares are relatively cheaply priced at 13.7 times their FY2021 expected EPS, coming quite close to our fair P/E ratio, which stands at around 14. The stock's yield has always remained relatively low, at around 1%-2%. Despite the rapid DPS increases, aggregate dividends (as well as buybacks) have remained quite humble as the company reinvests most of its proceeds back into the business.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

| Payout | 16%  | 22%  | 19%  | 21%  | 23%  | 27%  | 15%  | 20%  | 25%  | 17%  | 18%  | 19%  |

Investors can rely on Silgan's dividends since the company's payout ratio has always remained incredibly low, below 20%. Since the company's IPO in 1996, Silgan has never reported a money-losing quarter. Its products are vital for various consumer staples. Hence its operations are quite stable, displayed in its 17-year dividend growth record. At the same time, however, Silgan operates in a massively competitive space, with quite thin margins. The company's competitors include firms that are multiple times larger than Silgan, such as the Ball Corp. (BLL), the Packaging Corporation of America (PKG), keeping Silgan's net profit margins as low as 5.9%.

Overall, we believe that the company has showcased decades of robust cash flow generation, with little volatility to its financials. Its operations should remain quite stable even under adverse economic conditions, though the company is unlikely to grow faster than its industry's slow-paced and mature rate. The company's financial resiliency is evident by this quarter's 2026 senior secured notes issue, in which Silgan managed to get $500 million at an ultra-low rate of 1.4%.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Silgan has a long history of stable returns, lacking any wild fluctuations in its share price throughout the decades. Despite the stock's tiny dividend yield, combining its relatively modest growth expectations and potential for a valuation expansion near its average, we can see shares delivering double-digit returns in the medium term. Hence, we rate shares a buy at their current levels. Nonetheless, investors must be aware of the company's razor-thin net income margin, which could easily compress further amid increased competition, limiting the stock's potential returns over this period.
