Overview & Current Events

NACCO Industries is a holding company for The North American Coal Corporation, which incorporated in 1913. The company supplies coal from surface mines to power generation companies. At 35 million tons of annual production, NACCO Industries is the largest lignite coal producer in the U.S. and ranks among the top ten of all coal producers. NACCO Industries operates in the states of North Dakota, Texas, Mississippi, Louisiana and on the Navajo Nation in New Mexico. The company produces annual revenues of $141 million in normalized conditions. The company has been very active in purchasing and spinning off a wide variety of businesses in its history. In 1988 and 1990, NACCO Industries made several purchases that expanded the business to include housewares. In 2012, NACCO Industries spun off its Materials Handling Group (a combination of Yale Materials Handling Corporation and the Hyster Company). The company completed its spinoff of its housewares-related business on 9/29/2017.

NACCO Industries reported earnings results for the first quarter on 3/3/2021. Revenue grew 14.9% to $37.41 million. The company reported earnings-per-share of $1.25 compared to $0.88 in the previous year.

Coal revenues were higher by 14.7% to $8.4 million, mostly due an improvement in cost per ton. Unconsolidated coal deliveries declined 1.2% to 7.6 million tons. Consolidated coal deliveries improved 9% as demand improved. Limestone deliveries were up slightly from the prior year while revenue grew 39% to $12.6 million due to higher reimbursements and an improvement in customer mix. The company entered into an agreement in Q2 2020 to become the exclusive contract miner for the Thacker Pass lithium project in northern Nevada. Construction will now begin in 2022 with the production of lithium products to begin in 2023. Mineral Management revenues increased 5% to $5.5 million. This segment benefited from higher royalty income from assets in the Permian Basin.

Because NACCO Industries spun off its Materials Handling Group in 2012, it is not appropriate to compare today's company to the pre-spinoff equivalent. NACCO saw its earnings per share decline 6.5% per year through 2017. Although NACCO has shown negative growth since 2012 and volatile earnings-per-share since then, we are maintaining our projected growth of 1% due to expected improvements in revenues for the current year, and the prospects of growth from the Thacker Pass project.

NACCO Industries increased its dividend by 1.3% for 6/15/2020 payment.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	Now	2026
Avg. P/E	6.2	18.4	10.0	13.8	16.8	14.5	18.2	8.7	8.3	12.5	7.7	9.0
Avg. Yld.	2.3%	2.0%	1.7%	1.9%	2.0%	1.7%	1.3%	1.8%	1.6%	2.9%	3.1%	3.4%

Shares of NACCO Industries have increased by $2, or 8.7%, since our 3/8/2021 update. Focusing on just the past 5 years, NACCO Industries shares have traded with an average price to earnings multiple of 11.8. This is higher than the stock's current multiple of 7.7x earnings. Investors are just not willing to pay for a company that has an issue growing earnings consistently. NACCO Industries needs to prove it can reliably grow earnings-per-share before it reaches its 5-year historical averages. We maintain our 2026 P/E target of 9. If achieved, this would add 3.2% to annual returns over the next five years.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Payout	14%	38%	17%	26%	34%	25%	24%	13%	13%	37%	24%	31%

The previous version of NACCO Industries actually saw earnings improve during the last recession, but this is not the same company. NACCO Industries now sees a substantial portion of revenues from coal. As demand for coal fluctuates, so will the company's ability to produce revenue. The company has also kept its payout ratio low in recent years, which is a prudent decision by management as earnings-per-share continues to drop. NACCO Industries' primary competitive advantage is that it doesn't acquire existing coal mines or mining companies, as this would increase its leverage position. Instead, NACCO Industries focuses on reducing coal production costs and maximizing efficiency and operating capacity at the mine locations.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

After first quarter results, NACCO Industries is expected to return 7.2% annually through 2026, up from our previous estimate of 1.4%. This projected return stems from a 1% earnings growth rate, 3.1% dividend yield and a low single-digit contribution from multiple reversion. Coal deliveries were down once again, but overall revenue grew across all of the company's businesses. It remains to be seen if this quarter was a one-off event or if NACCO Industries can begin to show more consistency in its business. Until then, we rate shares as a hold.
