Tractor Supply has recorded very compelling growth through the last decade. Its earnings-per-share rose by 16.4% annually from 2011-2020. 2020's earnings-per-share were roughly four-and-a-half times as high as what the company earned during 2011. This growth was possible due to several contributing factors, including comparable store sales growth, the opening of new stores, margin expansion, and share repurchases. These factors will likely persist going forward, which is why the earnings-per-share growth outlook for Tractor Supply remains solid, at 3.5% annualized.

We are, however, reducing our growth guidance down from its previous level due to likely headwinds to come from the disruption caused in the energy markets and the broader economy from the coronavirus outbreak as well as the pulled forward demand growth experienced by the company as one of the few "essential businesses" during lockdown periods.

We expect the company to continue opening stores at a brisk pace and repurchasing shares, which should continue to drive growth in the face of headwinds.

a comparatively high valuation relative to how other brick and mortar retailers are valued. After slightly reducing our fair value multiple estimates to account for our expectation of declining growth in the near term as the company faces abnormally high comparable numbers, we see shares as trading above fair value.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Payout	9%	12%	16%	18%	20%	23%	28%	28%	29%	24%	28%	34%

Since 2011, Tractor Supply has paid dividends, and the payout has risen considerably since. This was possible due to a combination of earnings growth, share buybacks, and a rising payout ratio.

Many brick-and-mortar retailers feel the impact that Amazon (AMZN) and other online retailers are having on traffic at their stores, but Tractor Supply is relatively safe from the e-commerce threat. Many of the items the company sells are large and complex, and therefore not easily purchased online or shipped to customers' homes. This serves as a major advantage versus many other brick-and-mortar retailers. Tractor Supply also does not have a lot of competition in the niche market it serves. Profits declined by 10% from 2007 to 2008, during a recession, but recovered quickly and hit a new record high in 2009. We believe that Tractor Supply is not as vulnerable to recessions and economic downturns as other retail industries.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Tractor Supply is a strong company with continued growth runway ahead of it. That said, the shares appear to be richly valued at the moment and we expect negative annualized total returns moving forward (-1.7%) through the next half decade. We therefore rate the stock as a sell.
