Williams-Sonoma has a solid growth history. In the 2007 through 2019 period the company grew its earnings-per-share by an average compound rate of over 8% per year. Furthermore, 2020 proved to be a standout year amidst a difficult operating environment for many companies.

Unlike many other retailers, Williams-Sonoma has been able to increase its profits through the last couple of years, which is, among other factors, due to its consistent revenue growth. Thanks to its robust Omni-channel sales strategy, Williams-Sonoma has established a strong e-commerce business. As online sales continue to outpace company-wide revenue growth, Williams-Sonoma will become even more of an online retail company in the coming years.

This strategy is showing promise amid the COVID-19 pandemic, as the e-commerce portion of the business took up the slack for the brick-and-mortar locations and then some. Recent results during the crisis suggests that Williams-Sonoma is better positioned to weather the storm and indeed appears to be thriving in the current environment.

After strong Q1 2021 results, we are forecasting another standout year for 2021. We are also assuming 2% intermediate-term growth, which represents substantial improvement compared to pre-pandemic levels.

Updated May 27th, 2021 by Eli Inkrot

Williams-Sonoma has an interesting valuation history, with a typical multiple in the mid-teens coupled with occasional bouts of a 20+ earnings multiple. Taking into consideration the company's past performance, growth prospects, balance sheet and current situation, we believe a mid-teens multiple is a fair starting baseline for the security. With today's valuation of 16 times expected earnings, this implies little impact from the valuation.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Payout	33%	35%	44%	41%	42%	43%	44%	42%	43%	23%	22%	26%

Williams-Sonoma's competitive advantage lies in its unique product portfolio and successful move to the online space. Although the company competes against formidable foes including traditional brick-and-mortar home improvement retailers such as Home Depot and Lowe's, and e-commerce players such as Amazon. Results have been solid in the last decade, but we caution that the company's business model can be cyclical. During the last recession Williams-Sonoma posted earnings-per-share of $1.76, $0.28, $0.72 and $1.83 during the 2007 through 2010 stretch while the dividend was held steady and ultimately increased. In 2020 the company posted exceptional results.

Williams-Sonoma operates a relatively asset-light business model relative to other retailers, thanks to a high portion of online sales. As of the most recent report the company held $640 million in cash, $1.9 billion in current assets and $4.1 billion in total assets against $1.5 billion in current liabilities and $2.7 billion in total liabilities.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

After increasing from $30 to $162 over our last four reports, shares are up another 5% in the last three months. The share price has been on an exceptional run as business prospects have improved materially. Williams-Sonoma has transformed itself into an Omni-channel retailer with a large e-commerce presence, which is proving resilient during the current crisis. We are forecasting 3.3% annual total return potential, stemming from 2% growth and the 1.4% dividend yield. Shares earn a hold rating.
