Overview & Current Events

ARMOUR Residential (ARR) is a mortgage REIT that was formed in 2008. The trust invests primarily in residential mortgage-backed securities that are guaranteed or issued by a United States government entity including Fannie Mae, Freddie Mac and Ginnie Mae. ARMOUR has a $852 million market capitalization and produces about $114 million in net revenues.

ARMOUR reported Q2 results on July 22nd, 2021. The trust's liquidity including cash and unencumbered securities amounted to $832 million with $11.28 in book value per common share at quarter end. Core income in Q2 fell from 23 cents in Q1 to 21 cents per common share in Q2. The debt-to-equity ratio improved to 3.6-to-1 from 4.2-to-1.

Its securities portfolio included $8.2 billion of agency MBS and includes TBA securities. Meanwhile, its comprehensive loss stood at $61.3 million, representing 24% annualized return based on stockholder's equity at the beginning of the quarter. Our current estimate for earnings-per-share for this year now stands at $1.05 following Q2 results, and we note the dividend is now in excess of forecasted earnings.

ARMOUR's cash flow has been volatile since its inception in 2008, but this is to be expected with all mREITs. Of late, declining spreads have hurt earnings while the economic disruption caused by the coronavirus outbreak has disrupted the business model, leading to a sharp decline in cash flow per share, as well as a steep dividend cut. ARMOUR is seeing a measure of recovery, but we don't expect a return to former levels of earnings or dividends for the foreseeable future.

Moving forward, we expect the recovering economy and heavy government stimulus to enable the company to resume growth, though it will likely take a while for them to rebuild to previous levels of book value and earnings power given the low interest rate environment.

Valuation Analysis

Avg. P/E	3.7	4.2	3.9	4.2	3.9	---	9.3	8.6	6.7	7.7	9.8	7.0

As one would expect, ARMOUR's valuation has moved around a lot in recent years. With cash flow declining of late, the valuation has moved significantly higher. Given the current uncertainty facing the sector and the low spreads they are facing, we have reduced fair value further to 7 times cash flow. The company's current price to cash flow is considered overvalued. Given that shares trade above that level based on expectation for this year's cash flow per share, we expect multiple contraction over the coming years, providing a headwind to total returns.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Payout	73%	78%	80%	68%	70%	---	82%	88%	80%	72%	114%	88%

ARMOUR's quality metrics have been volatile given the performance of the trust as rates have moved around over the years. Gross margins have moved down since short-term rates began to rise meaningfully a couple of years ago, although it appears most of that damage has been done. Balance sheet leverage had been moving down slightly, but it saw an uptick again this past quarter. However, we do not forecast significant movement in either direction from this point. Interest coverage has declined with spreads but also appears to have stabilized, so we are somewhat optimistic moving forward, while keeping in mind the significant potential for volatility. ARMOUR faced headwinds from the coronavirus outbreak and an overall economic downturn. As a result, a steep dividend cut was necessary to preserve the balance sheet and allow the REIT to reposition itself for survival and future growth.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

We see 6.2% annualized total returns for shareholders in the coming years thanks to the attractive dividend yield of 11.7% being partially offset by multiple contraction. ARMOUR has endured some tough times in the past but with prudent leverage and a management team that does not chase unprofitable growth, it appears the company should be able to weather its uncertain future. Overall, we rate the stock a hold at the current price.
