Instead of EPS, we used funds from operations per share (FFO/S) as Dream Office's primary growth metric. We used FFO/S because it more accurately communicates a REIT's true performance, as EPS depreciates investment properties over time, however many investment properties actually increase in value over time. Dream Office's FFO/S has been very volatile over the last decade from inconsistent funds-from-operations, and also a rapidly increasing share count to 2014-2015, and then decreasing by over 50% from years 2016-2020. Since 2016, the trust has been engaged in heavy buybacks, dramatically reducing the shares outstanding.

Going forward we expect disruption from the coronavirus and the growing work-from-home movement to weigh on results this year and next before fundamentals rebound in the years following. Given the company's considerable exposure to high quality assets in Toronto and fairly low payout ratio, it should be able to weather the storm better than some peers.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	Now	2026
P/FFO	12.1	13.1	10.0	8.8	10.3	7.7	10.9	13.4	12.8	13.7	14.5	9.0
Avg. Yld.	4.8%	4.2%	5.6%	6.4%	9.2%	5.7%	3.6%	3.3%	3.5%	4.7%	4.7%	5.1%

Dream Office's average price to funds from operations ratio (P/FFO) has deviated significantly around its historic average of 10.6. Comparing current average P/FFO ratios to its historic average, Dream Office is overvalued at current prices. Given the uncertainty facing the global economy and office sector right now, we are lowering our fair value estimate to 9 times FFO, which is well below the current price to FFO ratio. We therefore expect valuation multiple compression to provide a meaningful headwind to total returns moving forward.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Payout	59%	55%	56%	56%	95%	46%	49%	44%	45%	66%	68%	46%

Dream Office has integrated best practices into its environmental platform since 2011. The trust has been proactively trying to reduce its environmental footprint by decreasing its resource consumption and greenhouse gas emissions. The trust also has a goal to use less energy and water to decrease waste to the environment. One way the trust cuts down on resources is by proactively developing and maintaining high-quality, energy-efficient buildings. All of Dream Office's buildings over 100,000 square feet are BOMA BEST Sustainable Buildings certified, which means the buildings are recognized in excellence in energy and environmental management and performance in commercial real estate.

Dream Office has not been around for a recession, but historically companies who operate predominantly office properties do not fare well in recessions. While local businesses are deteriorating, companies would be more likely to close offices rather than start new leases, so in a recession in the Canadian economy Dream Global should be adversely affected from potential losses of current and future tenants.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Overall, we expect total returns of 2.3% annually, mainly driven by Dream Office's dividend yield and FFO-per-share growth that will be partially offset by meaningful multiple compression. We believe the REIT's quality diversified portfolio will enable it to weather the current storm. As a result, we rate Dream Office REIT as a sell at current prices, though more conservative investors may want to look elsewhere given that the business model is not ideally suited to recessions and the total return potential is rather weak.
