Overview & Current Events

Ping An Insurance Company of China, one of the leading insurers in the country, was founded in 1988. The technology-powered personal financial services group has more than 220 million retail customers and more than 627 million Internet users, making the firm one of the largest financial services companies in the world. Ping An has two strategies, “pan financial assets” and “pan healthcare,” which focus on financial and healthcare services through the company’s financial services platform, along with its five ecosystems: financial services, healthcare, auto services, real estate services, and Smart City services. The Life and Health Insurance segment is the largest business, and represents over half of the company’s operating profit. As a Chinese company, Ping An Insurance reports its results in Chinese Yuan, but all numbers in this report are in USD, unless noted otherwise.

On August 27th, 2021, Ping An reported its Q2 results for the period ended June 30th, 2021. Ping An continued executing its growth strategy, expanding further on an operational basis. During the first half of the year, its retail customer count grew by 2.2%, or 15 million, to 223 million, with around 34.5% of those customers being sourced online. There are now more than 627 million users in Ping An’s ecosystem, an increase of 2.2% QoQ. Revenues were $55.7 billion, growing by approximately 4.8% YoY. The company’s technology business is growing rapidly, with operating profit growing 84.1% to $964 million. Excluding the “Trusts” and “Life and Health” segments, every other segment’s operating income grew by a double-digit rate. Hence, the group’s operating income grew by 10.1% YoY. EPADR declined by 20.5% to $0.54, but this was only due to one-off asset write-downs. We adjust our FY2021 EPADR estimates to $2.40. Ping An paid its interim dividend for H1-2021, amounting to $0.43. Assuming a final dividend around its past-year levels, we expect FY2021 DPADR of $0.66.

During the last ten years, Ping An has delivered resilient profits and consistent growth. More and more customers enter its insurance ecosystem by the quarter. China is a huge market, with a population well above 1 billion and a high economic growth rate. As a result, Life and Health Insurance – which make up the majority of the company’s operating profit - should continue delivering solid results in the medium term.

In addition, Ping An’s technology innovations, centered on fintech and health technologies, should also boost its growth. U.S.-based investors are currently benefiting from the ongoing depreciation of the Chinese Yuan against the USD. Hence the 10% DPADR hike in the first half year’s payout. We retain both our EPADR and DPADR growth estimates to 7%, powered by robust customer growth and fintech’s operating profitability expansion.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	Now	2026
Avg. P/E	18.2	23.9	17.3	14.2	12.8	9.8	14.3	9.9	9.8	9.0	6.9	8.0
Avg. Yld.	0.9%	0.8%	1.0%	1.1%	1.4%	2.2%	2.1%	2.9%	2.3%	2.3%	4.0%	3.4%

Ping An's valuation has varied significantly over the past decade, as earnings remained relatively stagnant for a few years before increasing significantly between 2013 and 2019. Despite governance issues in China, which partially cause valuations to be retained low in the insurance industry, we can see a higher multiple being attached in the medium term, amid Ping An's rapidly growing technology segments. Assuming FY2021 EPADR of $2.40, the stock is trading with a forward P/E of around 6.9, an all-time low multiple for the stock. With several synergies to be achieved, digitalizing the insurance and healthcare industry, we believe that a future P/E of around 8 is a much fairer valuation for the insurance giant. Therefore, we currently view shares as significantly undervalued, with a decent valuation expansion upside.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Payout	4%	3%	3%	3%	4%	6%	11%	17%	17%	25%	28%	28%

Ping An has maintained a low payout ratio of the past decade, retaining most of its earnings to be reinvested for future growth. The dividend remains well-covered. Management's latest increase should further reassure investors of its safety. Additionally, the company managed to increase its customers in all segments, which is utterly impressive considering the hundreds of millions it already has. Ping An has been developing significant competitive advantages, owning a well-known household brand name in the insurance space. Further, its robust underlying cash flows from premiums should maintain consistent profitability, increasing shareholder value over time. By operating through a well-diversified portfolio of financial, healthcare, and technology services, the company should not suffer from any adverse effects in its sales if one of them faces temporary challenges. This was the case during the Great Recession when Ping An performed resiliently. Still, profitability could come under pressure under a future recession.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Ping An has posted relatively strong results during the first of 2021, with its technology segments growing rapidly. Our valuation expansion projections coupled with our relatively modest growth estimates point towards annualized returns of 13.4% going forward. However, U.S. based investors often ignore Chinese equities, which could limit valuation expansion. However, we rate shares a buy at their current price levels, though investors should be wary of the risks related to Chinese securities.
