Overview & Current Events

Ritchie Bros. offers end-to-end solutions for buying and selling used heavy equipment, trucks, and other assets. The company's primary selling channels include Ritchie Bros. Auctioneers, the world's largest industrial auctioneer featuring online bidding, IronPlanet, an online marketplace with weekly auctions, and IronClad Assurance, which provides equipment condition certification. The company has a market cap of $6.4 billion, generates around $1.4 billion in annual revenues, and is based in Burnaby, Canada. Investors can trade its shares both on the TSX and NYSE. All figures in this report are in US dollars.

On August 5th, 2021, Ritchie Bros. reported its Q2-2021 results for the period ended June 30th, 2021. For the quarter, revenues increased 1.9%, to $396.36 million, powered by service revenue growth of 8% and fee revenue growth of 14% from the acquisition of Rouse. However, these increases were partially offset by lower ancillary revenue mainly due to lower fees earned on refurbishment, transportation, and redeployment of assets in the US. Growth was also compressed by a 7% decline in inventory sales growth.

Despite posting stable sales, net income and EPS grew to $60.7 million and $0.55, an increase of 15% and 12% (due to some extra share issuances), following slightly higher operating income and unfavorable adjustment regarding hybrid financing arrangements in Q2-2020. The company is now testing and learning more about how to serve its customers digitally, with Business Inventory Management System "IMS" activations increasing 34% sequentially compared to last quarter. Following strong profitability, the quarterly dividend was hiked by 14% to $0.25, implying an annualized rate of $1.00. Despite the relatively robust results, we are slightly adjusting our FY2021 EPS estimates from $1.80 to $1.68 to account for the recent lag in revenue growth.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Despite Ritchie Bros. consistently growing revenues over the past decade, profitability had lagged, particularly in the 2016-2019 time period, as the company was reinvesting towards growth. We lower our EPS growth estimates from 13% to 10% over the medium term to reflect the recent slowdown in sales growth. While technically not a slowdown due to a hard-to-compare boosted Q2-2020, we'd rather be a bit conservative for now and reaccelerate our estimates later if needed. The company is seeing strong demand for its auction services, while its acquisitions should inlock cost efficiencies, boosting net income. We believe strongly in Ritchie's potential synergies amongst its services (for example, certification provision before auction listing and vertical integration). Hence EPS growth is likely to remain solid. Due to profitability improving drastically, management has been accelerating its dividend growth recently. Dividend growth had fallen to as low as 3% in 2017, in line with stagnating EPS. In conjunction with this year's 14% dividend jump, we retain our dividend growth expectations at 10% in the medium term, comfortably supported by the company's underlining net income. Ritchie Bros. has been growing its dividends annually without any exception since 2004, marking a 17-year dividend growth record. Note: The current DPS run rate implies $1.00, but FY2021 DPS is likely to finalize at $0.94 as hikes occur mid-year.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	Now	2026
Avg. P/E	31.7	26.3	26.4	27.9	30.6	25.0	25.8	43.7	31.2	42.5	34.7	33.0
Avg. Yld.	2.0%	2.2%	2.6%	2.2%	2.2%	2.2%	2.2%	2.0%	1.9%	1.9%	1.7%	1.8%

Ritchie Bros' valuation has been incredibly consistent over the years, hovering from 25x to 30x its net income. Since 2020 the stock's P/E has skyrocketed. It now stands at around 34.7 as investors remain very optimistic in regards to the company's EPS growth. We continue to warn that a valuation compression is quite likely, despite the stock deserving its premium. We expect the stock's P/E to settle in the low 30's in the medium term, though we could be looking at a more optimistic multiple if EPS growth does not slow down. Shares have historically traded with a yield of around 2%, though the yield now hovers near 1.7% due to the stock's valuation expansion. It should remain thin going forward.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Payout	61%	64%	58%	65%	49%	78%	97%	63%	57%	55%	60%	60%

Ritchie Bros.' dividend coverage remains quite healthy. Despite the recent acceleration in dividend growth, the stock's payout ratio based on the company's expected FY2021 EPS is just around 60%. The company is the largest industrial-equipment auctioneer in the world, holding a significant competitive advantage due to its long-term expertise in the sector and the wide network effect of its online participants. Additionally, while its business model sounds sensitive to the industrial sector's cyclicity, the company is benefiting during such times as more equipment is brought forward to be auctioned (e.g., amid a company's liquidation), increasing its fees. During the Great Financial Crisis, for example, the company continued to enjoy revenue growth, despite the overall challenges in the economy. Hence, the company should remain resilient during a potential recession, enjoying robust cash flows.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Ritchie Bros. has been offering investors consistent, low volatility returns over the past couple of decades, featuring a well-managed dividend growth record. The company's solid top and bottom line during the pandemic, which adversely affected the overall industrial sector, is a testament to its resiliency. Powered by acquisition synergies and organic growth, profitability growth should remain solid. We estimate that shares are offering investors annualized returns of around 10.5% in the medium term. We, therefore, rate shares a buy at its current levels.
