Overview & Current Events

Regency Centers Corporation is a fully integrated real estate investment trust specializing in retail locations whose tenants include highly productive grocers, restaurants, service providers, and various other best-in-class retailers. The trust has full or partial ownership interests in 406 retail properties primarily anchored by market-leading grocery stores. Its properties are principally located in affluent and infill trade areas across the United States and contain 51,639 million square feet of gross leasable area. The trust generates about $1 billion in revenues and is based in Jacksonville, Florida.

On August 5th, 2021, Regency Centers Corporation reported its Q2 results for the quarter ended June 30th, 2021. Revenues grew by around 24.2% compared to last year, to $279.8 million. The trust saw a strong recovery from Q2-2020, during which the pandemic had adversely impacted its business.

Nareit FFO was $168.4 million, 60.9% higher YoY, following increased rental revenues and the absence of one-off expenses that occurred last year. On a per-share basis, FFO landed at $0.99 vs. $0.61 in Q2-2020 as a result. In addition, subsequent to the quarter-end (as of August 2nd), Regency had collected 96% of the first quarter pro-rata base rent. Further, at the end of the quarter, the trust's wholly-owned portfolio plus its pro-rata share of co-investment partnerships had a leased occupancy of 92.5%. Regency's same-property portfolio was also 92.9% leased, an improvement of 40 basis points quarter-over-quarter.

As of mid-July 2021, foot traffic in Regency's portfolio has recovered above 100% of 2019 foot traffic levels.

Following management's expectations of a faster recovery in retail locations than expected, the full-year outlook was raised. Management now forecasts FY2021 FFO/share of $3.50-$3.58 (previously $3.33-$3.43.) We have utilized the midpoint of this range in estimates.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Regency has achieved a solid track record of slowly but gradually higher FFO/share over time. The 10-year and 5-year FFO/share CAGRs stand at 1.9% and 5.3%, respectively. Over the past few years, the trust has faced increased pressure due to retail locations suffering against consumers' shift towards e-commerce. While its largest tenants include grocery majors such as Kroger (3%), Whole Foods (2.6%), and TJX (and 2.6% of annualized rent), which shouldn't go out of business any time soon, Regency's growth prospects remain limited. Still, some are worth noting.

Regency's current growth drivers include the redevelopment of Westbard Square in Bethesda, the development of Carytown Exchange, a Publix-anchored shopping center, and rental escalations. Consequently, we estimate FFO/share growth of 4% in the medium term.

Updated August 8th, 2021 by Nikolaos Sismanis

Regency slashed its dividend during the Great Financial Crisis and resumed its DPS growth in 2015. Since then, dividends have grown annually. We expect DPS growth of around 2% in the medium-term, which underlying FFOs could sustain.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	Now	2026
Avg. P/FFO	17.6	19.8	18.3	19.6	23.6	31.4	20.6	17.2	17.2	13.5	18.8	18.5
Avg. Yld.	4.2%	3.8%	3.9%	3.3%	2.8%	2.3%	3.3%	3.4%	3.5%	6.0%	3.6%	3.3%

Regency has traded at a relatively consistent valuation, around 20 times its FFO. While the stock has rallied from last year's lows, we believe that the current valuation multiple is rather fair, reflecting both the underlying risks and the trust's tenant diversification. We expect a medium-term P/FFO of around 18.5, quite close to the current multiple. The stock is currently offering a yield of 3.6%, and despite the risks associated with retail REITs, we expect it to remain below 3.5% due to the lack of substantial yields in the current market environment.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Payout	74%	75%	70%	65%	66%	73%	68%	58%	60%	80%	67%	61%

While Regency did cut its dividend back during the Great Financial Crisis, the resiliency shown during the pandemic combined with the relatively tolerable 70% payout ratio based on this year's expected FFO/share, we don't expect a dividend cut. That being said, if the trust's financials were to be under pressure again, a cut is not unlikely either. Overall, Regency enjoys some decent qualities, including a quality tenant base of blue-chip companies, with no tenant accounting for more than 3.5% of total revenues. It also maintains a strong balance sheet with a BBB+ credit rating from S&P, has $1.2 billion in liquidity, and features a net debt to EBITDA ratio of 5.93, which is rather comfortable.

Still, we can't ignore the fact the trust is currently operating in what is likely the least attractive real estate sub-sector, with issues such as missing rental collections already materializing. A prolonged recession is likely to adversely impact the trust's financials and lead to a dividend cut.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Regency Centers has shown a robust track record of FFO generation, maintaining solid financials even during the ongoing pandemic despite facing significant headwinds during the past year. Management's hiked guidance along with our prudent growth rate estimates, point towards annualized medium-term returns of around 6.8%. Hence we rate shares a hold. Investors should be wary of the underlying risks involved in holding retail REITs, nonetheless.
