Overview & Current Events

Dow Inc. is a standalone company that was spun off from its former parent, DowDuPont. That company has broken into three publicly traded, standalone parts, with the former Materials Science business becoming the new Dow Inc. Dow began trading on its own on April 1st, 2019, with the ticker DOW. It should produce about $55 billion in revenue this year and trades with a market capitalization of $41 billion.

Dow reported third quarter earnings on October 22nd, 2021, and results were better than expectations on both the top and bottom lines. Overall, the company said it sees very strong end-market demand that is expected to remain into 2022, but that is being tempered by near-term logistics constraints and low inventory levels.

Net income was $1.68 billion, up from a very small loss in the year-ago period. Total revenue soared 53% higher year-over-year and beat expectations at $14.84 billion. Packaging and Specialty Plastics were up 70% to $7.74 billion, Industrial Intermediates and Infrastructure was +47% to $4.48 billion, and Performance Materials and Coatings were +26% to $2.53 billion. The company said pricing was the biggest source of gains in revenue, with the segments producing pricing gains of 63%, 49%, and 23%, respectively. This indicates volumes didn't move higher, symptomatic of the supply chain and logistics issues the company mentioned.

We've moved our estimate for this year to $9.00 in earnings-per-share but note that it is quite likely this year will prove to be at least a medium-term top.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2026
EPS	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	$3.99	$3.49	$1.66	$9.00	$6.26
DPS	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	$2.10	$2.80	$2.80	$2.80
Shares²	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	747	743	745	747	600

We continue to expect earnings growth at -7%, as Dow's base of earnings is much higher for 2021. We also note that earnings growth for Dow and its predecessor companies has generally been a challenge, even under good conditions. With enormous pricing power helping drive results this year, we see it as very likely that 2021 marks a top in earnings for the foreseeable future.

Gains can accrue in the coming years from stabilized pricing, which has continued to improve immensely in 2021, margin gains from cost savings, and the company's share repurchase program. These factors combined should afford Dow the ability to produce some measure of earnings-per-share growth under normalized conditions, but we see normalized pricing as offsetting these factors in 2022 and beyond. We like the company's diverse product portfolio, and it should see demand hold up in a variety of environments. We note that 2020 is a negative outlier due to collapsing demand in many of Dow's markets, but this should abate as the world's economy returns to normal over time. In reversing the losses suffered in 2020, 2021 is likely to prove an outlier as well, with mean reversion to follow.

The dividend was initiated at $2.80 annually, good for a 4.9% yield on today's share price.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	Now	2026
Avg. P/E	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	14.4	26.5	6.3	13.0
Avg. Yld.	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	4.2%	6.4%	4.9%	3.4%

Since Dow only recently began trading on its own, there is no history in which to compare the current valuation. We see 13 times earnings as a reasonable valuation. That compares favorably to the current valuation of 6.3 times earnings, which implies the stock is undervalued. However, we note that expectations are currently for lower earnings after 2021, so the stock isn't quite as cheap as it appears. The yield is now up to 4.9% as well, so the stock's appeal as an income stock remains quite strong.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Payout	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	60%	169%	31%	45%

Dow's payout ratio is currently at 31% of estimated earnings. We think dividend raises will be tough to come by in the coming years, even as earnings are forecast to be quite strong this year.

While we don't have any data to understand how Dow will perform in a recession given that the business has only existed in its current form since April of 2019, we believe the company's product portfolio is not only its competitive advantage, but also should perform well enough during downturns to keep the company profitable. We see the company's focused efforts on high-growth areas such as consumer care, packaging, and infrastructure, as well as its very long operating history as a component of the former company, and its brand, as competitive advantages.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

We see Dow producing 10.8% total returns in the coming years, consisting of the ample yield, but earnings peaking in 2021. Dow's earnings outlook has improved since our last update, and we're upgrading the stock to a buy rating. The safety of the dividend appears to have improved with the 2021 outlook. However, we are very cautious on the company's ability to grow earnings from extremely high levels in 2021, and our projected total returns are reliant upon the valuation moving higher over time.
