Overview & Current Events

In 1905, William Pigott, Sr. founded Seattle Car Mfg. Co, focusing on railway and logging equipment, which would later become Pacific Car and Foundry Company and eventually PACCAR Inc. Today PACCAR designs and manufactures light, medium and heavy-duty trucks under the Kenworth (U.S., Canada, Mexico & Australia), Peterbilt (U.S. & Canada) and DAF (Netherlands, Belgium, Brazil & UK) nameplates. In addition, the company provides financial services, information technology, and distributes truck parts related to its business. PACCAR is a $30 billion market cap business that generated $19 billion in sales in 2020.

On April 27th, 2021, PACCAR increased its quarterly common dividend 6.3% to $0.34.

On October 26th, 2021, PACCAR released Q3 2021 results for the period ending September 30th, 2021. For the quarter PACCAR generated $5.15 billion in sales compared to $4.94 billion in Q3 2020. Truck sales declined -1.5%, while Parts sales were up 24.0% and the Financial Services segment was up 2.9%. Net income equaled $377.7 million or $1.08 per share compared to $385.5 million or $1.11 per share in Q3 2020. In the first three quarters of the year PACCAR has generated $1.34 billion in profit or $3.85 per share compared to $892.6 million or $2.57 in 2020. PACCAR delivered 32,800 trucks during the quarter.

PACCAR has an irregular dividend schedule: paying four regular quarterly dividends throughout the year and then supplementing this with a special dividend at yearend. The company has followed this practice for every year in the last two decades except for 2009. This method makes sense from a business perspective - only paying what you can afford instead of arbitrarily trying to bump up the payout - but you don't see it occur in practice very often. With that in mind, we are forecasting a $0.34 quarterly common dividend to go along with a $1.00 yearend special dividend. It's important to note that the special dividend is far from certain and can vary dramatically.

PACCAR operates in a needed industry: roughly 70% of total U.S. freight is hauled by truck, and the company currently supplies about a third of the heavy-duty market in the U.S., Canada, and Mexico. When economic times are good, the business is well positioned to capture its fair share of demand. Moreover, the company's focus on owner-operators instead of large customers has proven to be an advantage thus far. Further, the company's brands command a premium.

Of course, that is not to suggest that the company does not face risks. The business is largely cyclical already - depending a great deal on general economic progress - and the pandemic exacerbated this inherent risk. Still, we expect to see a recovery in 2021, forecasting $5.50 in earnings-per-share to go along with a 5% intermediate term growth rate. In addition, we are interested to see how the company's foray into electric trucks pans out.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	Now	2026
Avg. P/E	16.0	13.5	16.1	16.6	13.3	14.5	15.9	10.5	10.3	20.9	15.5	15.0
Avg. Yld.	2.8%	3.8%	3.2%	2.9%	3.9%	2.8%	3.2%	4.8%	5.1%	2.5%	2.8%	3.3%

Shares of PACCAR have traded hands with an average P/E ratio of about 15 times earnings. While earnings-per-share had risen dramatically through 2019, 2020 was a down year. We are comfortable with 15 times earnings as a fair value baseline. With shares trading at 15.5 times expected earnings, this implies a small valuation headwind.

PACCAR pays a special dividend every year, and we are forecasting a $1.00 payment for 2021. The company has paid a special dividend of $0.70, $2.30, $2.00, $1.20 and $0.60 in the last five years, demonstrating some of the cyclicity. PACCAR targets a 45% to 55% payout ratio, which we expect to continue in a normalized environment.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Payout	45%	51%	52%	49%	51%	41%	51%	51%	52%	53%	43%	50%

PACCAR currently enjoys a competitive advantage in offering a premium product to owner-operators. This has served the company exceptionally well in the past. Moving forward this advantage is less certain, as PACCAR will face economic cyclicity and the possibility of consolidation via autonomous vehicles. Both of which could hit its core customer.

The company's last recession performance – generating earnings of $2.78, $0.23, $1.25 and $2.86 in 2008 through 2011 – is noteworthy. It shows just how far earnings can fall during lesser times, but also gives you some insight into the resilience of the business. Also noteworthy is PACCAR's record of 82 consecutive years of net profit (the Great Recession was close) and paying a dividend every year since 1941 (although the lumpiness should still be considered).

PACCAR breaks its balance sheet down into two parts: Trucks, Parts & Other and Financial Services. The Trucks, Parts & Other segment held $3.6 billion in cash and securities and $13.0 billion in total assets against $5.6 billion in total liabilities. The Financial Services segment held $14.9 billion in assets against $11.0 billion in liabilities.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Shares are down -5% in the last year. PACCAR faces two main risks: poor performance during recessions and autonomous (or otherwise) vehicle disruption. Still, the company has proven to be a quality firm over a business cycle, has a conservative financial stance and a premium product. Total return potential comes in at 7.2% per annum, stemming from a 5% growth rate and a 2.8% expected dividend yield. Shares earn a hold rating.
