Overview & Current Events

Simon Property Group is a real estate investment trust (REIT) that was formed in 1993. The trust focuses on retail properties, mainly in the US, with the goal of being the premier destination for high-end retailers and their customers. The trust has interests in about 230 different properties that amount to nearly 200 million square feet of leasable space. Simon produces about $4.5 billion in annual revenue and has a market capitalization of $51.5 billion.

On November 1st, 2021, Simon reported its Q3 earnings for the period ending September 30th, 2021. Total revenues were $1.30 billion, 22.24% higher vs. the comparable period last year. Demand for the REIT's space from a broad spectrum of tenants kept growing, occupancy gains continued, and retailer sales accelerated, which drove the top-line's expansion. As a result of higher revenues and the absence of one-off expenses that took place last year, FFO per share jumped by 52.7% to $3.13.

Portfolio NOI, which includes domestic properties, international properties, and Simon's investment in Taubman Realty Group, increased by 24.5% compared to the prior-year period, which means that Simon's massive acquisition has been bearing fruits. Overall occupancy stood at 92.8% vs. 91.8% at the end of Q2, improving once again sequentially.

Following another impressive quarter, management hiked again its previously raised FY2021 FFO/share guidance to within a range of $11.55 to $11.65 (previously $10.70 to $10.80). We have updated our estimates accordingly. Further, the company hiked its quarterly dividend by another 10% to $1.65 (a 26.9% increase year-over-year), the third increase YTD, implying an annual DPS rate of $6.60.

Simon's FFO history has been quite resilient, seeing only a minor dip in profitability during the Great Recession. Simon's focus on high-end retailing has proven an immense source of strength in recent years, and we see that steady performance continuing. However, given Simon's already dominant position in the retail sector, the seemingly unstoppable rise of e-commerce crimping demand for physical stores, and how mature the current economic cycle is, it looks like Simon and other retail REITs will have a harder time with future FFO growth. That said, Simon is still the best retail REIT in the market by many metrics. Its occupancy rates remain high. It also a base minimum rent of $53.9 per square foot on average, which is tremendously high for the retail space. Simon has built a niche with high-end retailers over the years such that it has the most desirable spaces and developments and thus sees a virtuous combination of high occupancy and leasing rates. Its recent investment in Taubman seems to be performing stably, as well, with the company likely able to unlock operational efficiencies going forward. Simon was forced to cut its dividend to withstand its weaker performance caused by the pandemic, though management is raising it sequentially over the past couple of quarters. We expect FFO/share and DPS growth of 5% and 5%, respectively, going forward, reflecting the REIT's potential for growth in its square feet and lease rates while still remaining prudent due to the headwinds surrounding the retail.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	Now	2026
Avg. P/FFO	16.5	18.7	18.4	19	19.1	19.2	15.1	13.9	11.9	8.8	13.5	13.0
Avg. Yld.	3.1%	2.7%	2.9%	3.0%	3.2%	3.2%	4.2%	4.7%	5.6%	6.5%	4.2%	4.2%

Simon's valuation has been remarkably steady for much of the past decade, and today, at just 13.5 times FY2021's FFO estimates, the stock seems relatively fairly valued. We believe the current valuation adequately reflects the company's qualities and rapid recovery while still accounting for the market's distaste and risks attached to mall REITs. Further, the stock's current yield of 4.2% remains higher than its decade average of around 3.9%, which income-oriented investors are likely to appreciate given the current environment of ultra-low rates.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Payout	51%	51%	53%	58%	61%	62%	64%	65%	66%	66%	57%	57%

Simon's quality metrics have been very stable in the past decade as the company has kept operating metrics such as balance sheet leverage and interest coverage (2.59X) in a fairly narrow range. Profitability should improve further over time, with Simon's capacity to raise prices remaining robust. The payout ratio is currently at a very safe range too. The market seems to have priced much of that upside already, nonetheless. Simon's competitive advantage is in its world-class portfolio of properties that allow it to charge industry-best leasing rates. Another advantage is its low cost of capital that comes from its A-rated balance sheet, enabling it to invest in ways that competitors cannot afford to. That being said, it is not immune to recessions, as proven by its dividend cut during 2020 amid, admittedly, a black swan event for the industry. However, despite the cut, Simon's operations have held up fairly well, mostly recovered already.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Overall, we forecast Simon to produce 8.8% total annualized returns in the coming years. We believe that Simon offers investors a decently valued stock with an above-average yield and dividend growth prospects ahead. Its strong metrics, world-class management, high-quality real estate portfolio, and the so-far promising acquisition of Taubman should keep translating to robust financials. We have adjusted Simon's rating from a buy to a hold following the stock's rally since our last report and lower annualized return potential.
