Overview & Current Events

The Travelers Companies was founded in 1864 in Hartford, CT by two local businessmen. The company began with life and accident insurance but has expanded into other types of coverage in the 150+ years since then. Today, it generates just over $33 billion in annual revenue and has a $39 billion market capitalization. The company offers a wide and deep variety of protection products for auto, home, and business customers. It is also a member of the Dow Jones Industrial Average, making it the only property casualty insurance provider in the prestigious index.

Travelers reported fourth quarter and full-year earnings on January 20th, 2022, and results were once again better than expected on both the top and bottom lines. Earnings-per-share on an adjusted basis came to $5.20, which easily beat estimates for just $3.80. Earned premiums, which is a form of revenue for insurers, rose 7.2% year-over-year to just over $8 billion, fractionally better than expected. Net written premiums of $8 billion were up 10% compared to the year-ago period, while net written premiums for the full year came to a record of $31.96 billion.

Core income was up due to higher net investment income, as well as a higher underlying underwriting gain. These were partially offset by lower net favorable prior year reserve development. The consolidated combined ratio was 88.0%, and the underlying combined ratio was 88.7%. These values were essentially equal with the year-ago period.

Book value ended at $119.77 per share, up 4% year-over-year. Adjusted book value per share rose 10% year-over-year to $109.76. We forecast $12.55 in earnings-per-share for this year as earnings are normalizing out of COVID conditions that saw record earnings in 2021.

After strong growth coming out of the Great Recession, Travelers failed to regain its 2015 high of $10.87 in earnings-per-share until 2021. Conditions were quite favorable in 2021 in that prior reserve developments were unwound, investment conditions were excellent, and losses were lower than normal. This year should result in more normalized conditions, but as a result, we are expecting higher 6% earnings-per-share growth annually in the coming years, noting that insurer earnings are notoriously volatile.

Travelers could achieve this growth primarily from higher underwritten premiums and the buyback program, although margins should play a part as well, as long as there aren't any large catastrophes. We forecast low single-digit gains from higher revenue as well as a similar tailwind from the company's buyback, which has reduced the float by about a third in just the past decade alone. Recent reductions have been smaller in size given the higher share price, but Travelers is committed to reducing its share count over time. Lower operating expenses should also provide a bit of a boost to earnings, but the Travelers story is about higher premiums, lower catastrophe losses, and a lower share count.

The Travelers Companies (TRV)

Updated January 23rd, 2022, by Josh Arnold

The dividend has been raised in the mid-single-digit range annually and we expect that will continue for the foreseeable future. Travelers is not a pure income stock, but its 2.2% yield is still decent by its historical standards, and about 100bps better than the S&P 500.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	Now	2027
Avg. P/E	10.3	8.8	8.8	9.7	11.2	17.2	14.7	14.5	11.3	11.0	13.0	12.0
Avg. Yld.	2.8%	2.3%	2.3%	2.3%	2.4%	2.3%	2.3%	2.3%	2.9%	2.3%	2.2%	2.3%

Travelers' price-to-earnings multiple stands at 13 times this year's earnings estimate. We therefore see the stock as somewhat overvalued given that our estimate of fair value is 12 times earnings. That implies a moderate negative impact to annual returns due to the valuation.

We forecast the yield to rise to 2.3% over time as the dividend is raised and as the valuation could moderate.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2027
Payout	28%	21%	20%	22%	25%	38%	34%	34%	32%	25%	28%	28%

Travelers continues to be conservatively financed and does not have significant debt coming due in the next two years, so its balance sheet is in good shape and interest coverage remains robust. We believe the payout ratio should remain around one-third of earnings given that we are forecasting earnings and the dividend to grow at roughly congruent rates. The dividend is, therefore, very safe and we see many more years of increases on the horizon. Importantly, this continues to allow Travelers to buy back hundreds of millions of dollars of its own shares annually.

Travelers' main competitive advantages is in its immense scale and recognizable brand. Its size allows it to underwrite policies that others would not be able to, and its brand is well-known from its long history. Travelers is more susceptible to catastrophes than recessions, as we saw in 2017 and again in 2018. This makes Travelers a defensive play should the economy weaken materially, but we reiterate that insurance companies are susceptible to significant and unforeseen shocks, as Travelers has demonstrated in recent years.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Travelers looks like a safe financial services provider with a decent growth outlook. We forecast total annual return potential of 6.4% in the coming years, consisting of the 2.2% yield, 6% earnings-per-share growth and a small headwind from the valuation. We're reiterating Travelers at a hold rating as the stock is still slightly overvalued in our view.
