Overview & Current Events

Apollo Global is an alternative asset manager that was founded in 1990 and went public in 2011. The company takes investment capital and puts it to work wherever it sees opportunity, including in credit, private equity, and buyouts of companies. Assets under management have grown by more than five times in the past decade and sit at $498 billion today. Apollo has about 2,000 employees and the stock trades with a market capitalization of $39 billion.

Apollo reported fourth quarter and full-year earnings on February 11th, 2022, and results were somewhat weak against expectations. Distributable earnings came to $483 million in Q4, or $1.05 per share. Fee related earnings were $309 million, or 67 cents per share. For the year, distributable earnings were $2.03 billion, or $4.56 per share. Fee related earnings were $1.2 billion, or $2.68 per share in 2021.

Total assets under management ended the year at $498 billion, and fee-generating assets under management came to $369 billion. Performance fee-eligible AUM was $144 billion. Apollo ended the year with $47 billion in dry powder, which is about where it's been for the past couple of years. Apollo is not aggressively deploying its excess capital, but it is also seeing strong inflows. The full year saw $68 billion of inflows, and Q4 alone produced $24 billion in inflows. Apollo deployed $35 billion in Q4, and $116 billion for the year.

Apollo's earnings are notoriously volatile, and we see 2022 as no exception. However, in this case, we think Apollo can continue its current momentum, and we forecast $5.55 as our initial earnings number for this year.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2027
EPS	$3.82	$4.80	$1.42	$0.96	$2.36	$3.57	-$0.30	$2.71	$0.44	$4.56	$5.55	$7.08
DPS	$1.35	$3.95	$3.11	$1.96	$1.25	$1.85	$1.93	$2.02	$2.31	$2.10	$1.60	$2.04
Shares¹	130	146	163	181	185	195	200	200	228	249	280	360

Apollo's volatile earnings-per-share history is to be expected. Due to the complexity and variability of Apollo's investment strategy, returns are very lumpy. We see earnings growth from here at 5% annually.

Apollo continues to grow its assets under management, which then allows it to grow its investment portfolio. This will be the primary source of returns moving forward as Apollo has more capital to enter new investments. When Apollo enters and exits its stakes in these investments is critical for earnings, but these events cannot be forecast ahead of time, and thus results in volatility in earnings. For this reason, Apollo shares are not for the risk-averse investor. Apollo's dry powder is $47 billion, so we see this as a potential tailwind for growth when this money is eventually deployed, particularly if deployments are made at favorable prices. We note the company hasn't been aggressively deploying capital up to this point.

Apollo's dividend is important, currently yielding 2.4%. This yield is lower than it has been for substantially all the time the company has been public, so on this measure, the stock appears overvalued. Apollo's dividend is also irregular in that the company distributes what it can based upon earnings. The payout has seen a very wide range in the past several years due to this, and the dividend is therefore also difficult to forecast. Apollo cut its dividend for the February 2022 payment to 40 cents per share. Apollo's dividend is variable and based upon earnings, so cuts aren't unusual. However, we note the annualized yield is now extremely low based upon the company's history.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	Now	2027
Avg. P/E	3.7	5.5	18.9	21.4	7.2	7.6	---	12.3	---	13.0	11.9	13.0
Avg. Yld.	9.6%	15.1%	11.6%	9.6%	7.4%	6.8%	6.0%	5.8%	5.1%	3.5%	2.4%	2.2%

Apollo has traded as high as 21 times earnings but is down to 11.9 today. We see fair value at 13 times earnings, implying an annual tailwind from valuation expansion if this were to come to fruition. We see the yield remaining about where it is today, but we reiterate that Apollo's variable dividend makes it challenging to forecast.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2027
Payout	35%	82%	219%	204%	53%	52%	---	75%	---	46%	29%	29%

Apollo's dividend policy is to pay out most of the company's earnings to shareholders but note that the company's irregular dividend policy means any particular year may have a very high or very low payout ratio. Volatility in the payout isn't ideal for income investors, so some caution is warranted. The four declared dividends for 2021 came to $2.10, although the most recent dividend was 40 cents per share. This ended the company's four-year streak of dividend increases.

Apollo held up extremely well during the 2020 recession, and we see it as well positioned coming out of it and into a recovery. Its competitive advantage is in its world-class leadership team that has years of experience in successful investment management, and its ability to continue to raise capital.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

We forecast total annual returns of 9% in the years to come, consisting of the 2.4% yield, 5% earnings growth and a tailwind from the valuation. Apollo is certainly not for the risk-averse investor, and we see the valuation as driving high potential returns. The dividend yield is quite low based upon the company's historical yields, but shares earn a hold rating given the improvement in the valuation and earnings.
