Overview & Current Events

SLR Senior Investment is a Business Development Company (BDC) which is externally managed by Solar Capital Partners. It invests primarily in senior first lien secured loans of private, middle-market companies. Its investment criteria include companies that generate revenues between $50 million and $1 billion, EBITDA of $15 million to $100 million, and demonstrate resilient cash flows through economic cycles. Hence management avoids speculative investments as much as possible. SLR Senior Investment was founded in 2010 and is based in New York, New York. Effective February 25th, 2021, the company changed its name from Solar Senior Capital to SLR Senior Investment Corp, for branding reasons.

On March 1st, 2022, SLR Senior Investment reported its Q4-2021 results for the period ending December 31st, 2021. For the full year, gross and net investment income (NII) came in at $29.3 million and $13.3 million, a decline of 7.8% and 29.9% year-over-year, respectively. Once again, the decrease of the former was primarily due to a slightly lower average portfolio yield on a smaller, on average, income-producing investment portfolio. The decline of the latter was due to higher administrative expenses.

NII/share totaled $0.89 compared to $1.27 during the comparable period last year. NAV/share fell further quarter-over-quarter, from $15.73 to $15.43, as the company distributed more than it earned during the period, deteriorating its financial health. This is despite FY2020's dividend cut. The company's investment portfolio remains diversified, with approximately 210 unique borrowers in over 100 industries with an average issuer exposure at $3.0 million, or <0.5% of its total loans. We forecast FY2022 IIS/share of $1.10. However, unless another dividend cut occurs or the company's results improve, we expect SUNS's NAV/share to keep deteriorating.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2027
IIS¹	$1.46	$1.10	$1.01	$0.09	$1.88	$1.46	$0.86	$1.43	$1.27	$0.89	$1.10	$1.21
DPS	$1.29	$1.41	$1.41	$1.41	$1.41	$1.41	$1.41	$1.41	$1.27	$1.20	$1.20	$1.20
Shares²	9.5	11.4	11.5	11.5	12.9	16.0	16.0	16.0	16.0	16.0	16.0	16.0

SLR Senior's conservative investment strategy has been a double-edged sword. The company's avoidance of higher-risk investments has failed to deliver stable returns, as originally intended. Low-risk companies can easily access financing at the current ultra-low rate environment, not allowing SLR Senior to get high-enough portfolio yields. Financial services, insurance, and other traditional companies account for the majority of investments. Industries that could potentially attract higher yields are almost completely absent, such as software, which makes up just 2.4% of its investments. Hence, investment income per share (IIS) has struggled to sustain the dividend. With the pandemic further increasing global credit availability and with higher credit yields only found in tech at the moment, management was forced to cut its dividend in 2020 to an annualized rate of $1.20. This was a move that was necessary considering the lackluster results as of late. The company pays its dividends on a monthly basis.

Updated March 2nd, 2022 by Nikolaos Sismanis

We have assumed investment income per share growth of 2% in the medium-term to justify management's decision not to cut the dividend further. We assume that the company's rationale lies in expecting per-share growth moving forward. We don't expect DPS growth moving forward. It's quite common for BDCs to issue equity in order to fund their future expansion since they have to distribute at least 90% of their net income. As the table depicts, the company has not issued any shares lately, indicating a lack of available investments that meet both the company's conservative criteria and adequate yields.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	Now	2027
Avg. P/I	12.3	16.7	16.9	---	11.4	11.8	19.3	11.7	22.5	7.0	12.4	11.0
Avg. Yld.	7.6%	7.6%	9.1%	9.9%	8.8%	8.7%	8.7%	8.1%	8.1%	7.7%	8.8%	9.0%

SLR Senior's valuation has been notably higher than its peers, despite the company's relatively weak performance. We believe that the company will continue to struggle due to its strict and limited industry investment criteria. Hence, we view that the company's current multiple on our expected FY2022 results is not quite justified. We believe that fair value for the stock is near 11 times its underlying net income, which is closer to the industry average. This implies the possibility of valuation headwinds in the medium-term. The yield presently sits at around 8.8%, which should be the main driver of future shareholder returns.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

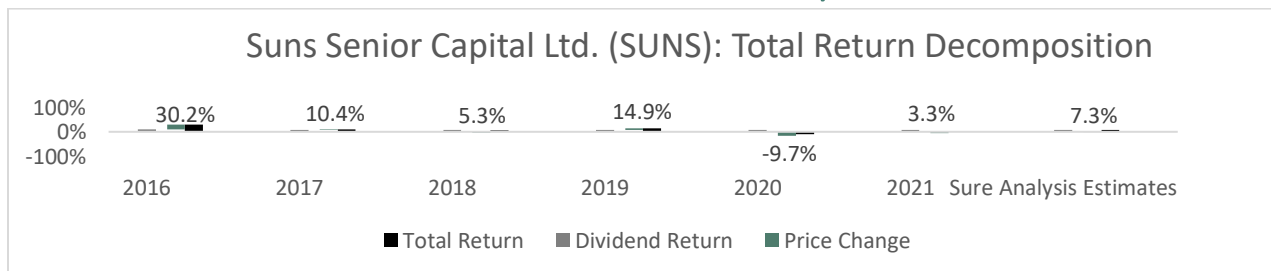

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2027
Payout	88%	128%	140%	---	75%	97%	164%	99%	146%	167%	109%	99%

Despite the recent dividend cut, current payouts are not covered by net investment income, resulting in NAV deterioration. Considering the company's investment style, which limits portfolio growth, and lack of sufficient coverage, another cut is not impossible. While the company was not public during the last recession, its investment performance held relatively ok during the challenges caused by the pandemic. The company's issues are mostly related to the available investments and refinancing rates rather than its underlying portfolio, which is currently 100% operational. Finally, while there are some qualities to appreciate, such as stable cash flows and external management that reduces costs, the company doesn't showcase any competitive advantages whatsoever.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

SLR Senior Capital has performed decently over the past few years, with a relatively stable dividend track record despite 2020's dividend cut. However, the company doesn't appear able to cover its current dividend, with its investment results remaining very weak. We forecast a total return potential of around 7.3% per annum, driven by the 8.8% dividend yield offset by the possibility for modest valuation headwinds. SLR Senior Capital earns a hold rating as we believe there are significant risks attached to the stock.
