Overview & Current Events

Siemens AG is a German industrial conglomerate that operates in the following business units: Energy, Healthcare, Industry, and Infrastructure & Cities. Siemens was founded in 1847 and today employs about 300,000 people worldwide. Siemens is headquartered in Munich, Germany. American investors can purchase Siemens stock through American Depository Receipts that trade over-the-counter under the ticker SIEGY. Siemens reports its results in €, but all numbers in this report are in U.S. Dollars unless noted otherwise.

Siemens AG reported its second quarter (fiscal 2022) earnings results on May 12. The company generated revenues of €17.0 billion, which is equal to ~$18 billion, and was 16% more than the previous year's quarter on an adjusted basis. Siemens' orders did grow by 32% during the most recent quarter on a comparable, currency-adjusted basis, to €21 billion, which was a very attractive order intake pace. The fact that Siemens was able to generate higher orders than revenues and to maintain a book-to-bill ratio well north of 1.0 bodes well for future revenue growth.

Siemens' earnings-per-ADR totaled €0.75 during the second quarter, which is equal to $0.79, which was down year over year as a result of the Russia-Ukraine war which led to a one-time earnings hit. Despite this macro headwind, some earnings-per-share growth is expected for the current year, as Siemens is forecasting earnings-per-share of €8.70 to €9.10. This translates into earnings-per-ADR of $4.67 at the midpoint of the guidance range. In USD, that's down compared to 2021, as the US Dollar has strengthened significantly against the Euro in recent months. But Siemens' growth in constant currency is positive, at around 7%, as earnings-per-share totaled €8.32 last year. Siemens paid a $2.26 dividend in February, which was 7% more (in USD) than during the previous year.

Between 2009 and 2019, Siemens recorded an earnings-per-share growth rate of 9% annually. During 2009 Siemens' earnings were artificially low due to the impact of the last financial crisis, which allowed for above-average growth during the years of the following recovery. The above table is in USD, which has strengthened over the years, which hurts the comparison for companies that report their results in €.

During 2019 Siemens' profits declined, but this was due to the Osram spin-off. Adjusted for that, Siemens' earnings rose by 15%. Siemens' strong order backlog and the fact that Siemens is holding a solid position in growth markets such as manufacturing 4.0, will allow Siemens to grow its profits over the coming years. Siemens does, as one of just a few German companies, regularly engage in buybacks. Due to its strong order backlog and leading market position Siemens has weathered the pandemic relatively well, despite some temporary factory shutdowns.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	Now	2027
Avg. P/E	12.8	16.4	16.6	15.2	14.3	15.3	14.3	13.6	23.3	18.4	12.8	16.0
Avg. Yld.	4.1%	3.8%	3.2%	3.5%	3.7%	3.3%	3.6%	4.2%	3.1%	2.6%	3.8%	3.2%

Siemens' shares have been valued at a mid-teens price-to-earnings multiple throughout the majority of the last decade. Industrial businesses can be cyclical, and their stock prices and valuations tend to be cyclical as well, but surprisingly there are no large outliers in Siemens' valuation throughout the last decade, except for pandemic-impacted 2020. Shares are trading below our fair value estimate right now, based on our estimates for the current year.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2027
Payout	52.6%	61.7%	52.4%	53.3%	53.1%	50.8%	50.8%	57.0%	71.6%	47.4%	48.4%	50.7%

Siemens' dividend payout ratio has been around 50% throughout the majority of the last decade, but during the financial crisis there were large swings in the company's payout ratio. The company was not forced to cut its payout during the last financial crisis. We believe that Siemens' dividend remains relatively safe going forward.

One of Siemens' most important competitive advantages is its robust industrial backlog. The company typically books more business than it is capable of completing at any given time, which causes it to operate with a book-to-bill ratio (new contracts divided by total revenue) above 1.0. This has resulted in a large backlog of uncompleted business over time. This helps in times when order intake slows down, which is expected for the remainder of the current year, due to the impact that the coronavirus has on the globe's economy, although lockdown-induced production stops still hurt.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Siemens is a large and diversified industrial company that has managed to generate solid business growth in the past. The company is, due to its large backlog and solid order intake, relatively resilient versus recessions. 2021 was a strong year for Siemens, and it looks like 2022 will be even better once we adjust for forex rates. With shares trading well below fair value and promising attractive total returns over the coming years, we rate Siemens a buy at current prices.
