Overview & Current Events

S&P Global is a worldwide provider of financial services and business information with a market capitalization of $113 billion and revenue of just under $13 billion. The company's early-2022 acquisition of IHS Markit boosted its pro forma revenue by about 50%. S&P Global has paid dividends continuously since 1937 and has increased its payout for 49 consecutive years.

S&P reported first quarter earnings on May 3rd, 2022, and results were weaker than expected on both the top and bottom lines. The company posted $2.89 in earnings-per-share, which missed estimates by eight cents. In addition, while revenue was up 18% year-over-year to $2.39 billion, it missed estimates by $650 million.

Revenue growth was driven by improvements in five of the company's six divisions, which was partially offset by a sharp decline in revenue related to debt issuances. As prevailing interest rates rise, this is likely to continue to be a headwind for S&P.

Adjusted pro forma operating margin declined 340bps to 45.2% of revenue, primarily because of declines in Ratings transaction revenue, investments in technology, and higher expenses. The company also noted higher expenses for things like travel and compensation although it expects these to moderate throughout the rest of the year.

Following the consummation of the IHS Markit acquisition, management now expects revenue to rise at least 40% this year. Earnings-per-share on an adjusted basis is now expected in the range of $13.40 to $13.60; we've updated our estimate accordingly at the midpoint.

Further, management has stated it expects to buy back $12 billion worth of shares this year, with the first $7 billion to be bought by August in an accelerated program.

S&P Global's business has benefited from a series of favorable secular trends. Since the Great Recession in 2009, total corporate debt has been on a steady rise, which means more ratings are needed. Lower global interest rates have continued to lead to more and more issuances of debt. However, this tailwind was quickly unwound in Q1, at least temporarily. In addition, the company has three other strong segments that aren't as dependent upon rates remaining low, should they rise again in the future. This diversification away from ratings has been strengthened by the IHS Markit acquisition.

Investors are also becoming increasingly sophisticated and thus demand more real-time data and analytics. Moreover, there is an accelerating demand for index-related investments, such as ETFs.

S&P Global (SPGI)

Updated May 22nd, 2022, by Josh Arnold

S&P Global has grown consistently since the financial crisis, boosting revenue and operating margins on a regular basis, with 2020 and 2021 results showing a continuation of this trend. We think S&P Global will see a tailwind from its buyback, as well as mid-single-digit revenue gains, and some measure of margin expansion to get to our target of 8% earnings-per-share growth annually in the coming years. That is lower than the company's historical rate of growth but given the immense growth the company has already seen it is prudent to temper one's expectations. We think S&P Global has a very bright outlook, particularly given the reemergence of Ratings as the leader of the company's segments. S&P Global has shown it can continue to raise operating margins and boost the top line organically and via acquisitions.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	Now	2027
Avg. P/E	---	19.2	21.1	21.8	20.3	20.9	22.6	24.2	27.1	29.4	25.5	26.0
Avg. Yld.	---	1.8%	1.5%	1.3%	1.3%	1.1%	1.0%	1.0%	0.8%	0.8%	1.0%	1.2%

S&P Global's 5-year average price-to-earnings ratio is 23, but we're assessing fair value at 26 times earnings given the sustained, outstanding performances the company has produced. The stock is currently trading at a price-to-earnings ratio of 25.5 and thus, is much closer to our estimate of fair value, due to the selloff since our last update. We therefore see a much smaller impact to total returns from the valuation in the coming years.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2027
Payout	---	34%	31%	29%	27%	24%	24%	24%	23%	22%	25%	30%

The most important feature of S&P Global is its strong competitive position. It operates in the highly concentrated financial ratings industry where the three well-known rating agencies control over 90% of global financial debt ratings. On the other hand, S&P Global is vulnerable to recessions, as companies, countries and individuals become much more conservative during such periods, and thus their interest in financial services and debt issuance greatly decreases. This was evident in the Great Recession, when S&P Global's earnings-per-share fell -21%, from $2.94 in 2007 to $2.33 in 2009. However, given that it was a financial crisis and most companies saw their earnings collapse, the performance of S&P Global was solid overall. To its credit, S&P Global's earnings thrived in 2020 despite a sharp recessionary period.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

S&P Global enjoys the advantage of an oligopoly in the ratings industry and has ample room to keep growing at a rapid pace in all its segments for years. With earnings growth of 8%, we expect 9.4% average annual returns over the next five years after accounting for dividends and a small valuation tailwind. S&P Global is a Dividend Aristocrat, and the valuation is much improved. Shares continue to earn a hold rating.
