Average portfolio loans and leases improved 8.4% to $117.7 billion year-over-year. Provisions for credit losses was $179 million in the second quarter, compared to a benefit of $115 million in the prior year. The non-performing asset ratio of 0.47% matched the first quarter's figure, but was 14 basis points below the same period a year ago. Average deposits increased slightly from the same period a year ago. Net interest income grew 8.3% from both the prior year and on a sequential basis. Net-interest-margin of 2.92% was up 29 basis points year-over-year and higher by 33 basis points quarter-over-quarter. Fifth Third Bancorp's earnings-per-share had a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 9.5% for the 2012-2021 period. However, the COVID-19 pandemic greatly impacted the banking sector in general and Fifth Third Bancorp in particular in 2020, setting up a very easy comparison for 2021. The previous 2010 to 2019 -year period saw a CAGR of almost 16%. That said, even this growth rate is deceiving as the bank was in the midst of a recovery from the 2007-2009 recession and started from a low base. We feel that a 3% earnings growth rate going forward is appropriate until Fifth Third Bancorp can prove that its business has recovered from the pandemic.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2027
Avg. P/E	8.5	8.9	12.6	9.9	10.0	10.1	11.7	10.0	10.3	11.6	9.3	10.0
Avg. Yld.	2.5%	2.6%	2.4%	2.6%	2.7%	2.2%	2.5%	3.4%	4.9%	2.5%	3.5%	3.3%

Shares of Fifth Third Bancorp have decreased by another $7, or 17.1%, since last report. The stock has traded with an incredibly consistent valuation range over the last decade, rarely dropping below a price-to-earnings ratio of 8 and rarely climbing above 12. We have a five-year target multiple of 10 times earnings, as we feel that this valuation reflects the company's business prospects and reflects the medium- and long-term average price-to-earnings ratios. With shares trading with a price-to-earnings ratio of 9.3, this implies a 1.4% annual tailwind to total returns from multiple expansion through 2027.

Shares yield roughly twice that of the S&P 500 index and the dividend has a 10-year CAGR of more than 14%.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2027
Payout	22%	23%	31%	26%	27%	23%	29%	34%	50%	32%	33%	33%

Along with much of the banking sector, Fifth Third Bancorp suffered significant losses during the financial crisis recession. Earnings-per-share totaled $1.70, -$3.94, and $0.67 for 2007, 2008 and 2009 respectively. At the same time, the dividend was cut twice for a total reduction of 98%. It took the company until 2013 to establish a new earnings-per-share high and the dividend still has not recovered from its pre-Great Recession levels. Growth since has been mixed, even without the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic. Therefore, we do not believe that Fifth Third Bancorp is a recession-proof name. We also don't believe that Fifth Third Bancorp possess any significant advantages to its peers. The company does have a presence in certain growing states, such as Florida, but much of its core business is in the Midwest, which has seen population decline in recent years.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Fifth Third Bancorp is now expected return 7.5% annually through 2027, up from our prior forecast of 2.9%. Our projected return stems from a 3% earnings growth rate, a starting yield of 3.5%, and a small contribution from multiple expansion. Fifth Third Bancorp continues to see solid loan growth and the improvements in net interest income was a positive sign. The company did see an increase in PCLs and should be something to monitor going forward. We have raised our five-year price target $1 to $42 and now view shares of Fifth Third Bancorp as a hold due to projected returns.
