Tractor Supply has recorded very compelling growth through the last decade. Its earnings-per-share rose by 16.3% annually from 2012-2021. 2021's earnings-per-share were roughly four-and-a-half times as high as what the company earned during 2012.

This growth was made possible by several contributing factors, including comparable store sales growth, the opening of new stores, margin expansion, and share repurchases. These factors will likely persist going forward, which is why the earnings-per-share growth outlook for Tractor Supply remains positive despite the company facing very tough comparable metrics.

Tractor Supply Company (TSCO)

Updated July 23rd, 2022 by Samuel Smith

Tractor Supply operates in an attractive niche market of the large brick-and-mortar retail industry. The company has produced consistent and attractive growth over the last decade, which is why it is not surprising to see shares trading at a comparatively high valuation relative to how other brick and mortar retailers are valued. After slightly reducing our fair value multiple estimates to account for rising interest rates, the increased prospect of a recession, and the expectation of declining growth in the near term as the company faces abnormally high comparable numbers, we see shares as trading above fair value.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2027
Payout	12%	16%	18%	20%	23%	28%	28%	29%	24%	26%	39%	40%

Since 2011, Tractor Supply has paid dividends, and the payout has risen considerably since. This was made possible by a combination of earnings growth, share buybacks, and a rising payout ratio.

Many brick-and-mortar retailers feel the impact that Amazon (AMZN) and other online retailers are having on traffic at their stores, but Tractor Supply is relatively safe from the e-commerce threat. Many of the items the company sells are large and complex, and therefore not easily purchased online or shipped to customers' homes. This serves as a major advantage versus many other brick-and-mortar retailers.

Tractor Supply also does not have a lot of competition in the niche market it serves. Profits declined by 10% from 2007 to 2008, during a recession, but recovered quickly and hit a new record high in 2009. We believe that Tractor Supply is not as vulnerable to recessions and economic downturns as other retail industries.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Tractor Supply is a strong company with a significant growth runway still ahead of it. That said, the shares appear to be fully valued at the moment, and we expect annualized total returns moving forward of 9.7% through the next half decade as a result of multiple compression and a weakening growth rate. We therefore rate the stock as a Hold.
