Overview & Current Events

American Capital Agency Corp was founded in 2008, and is a mortgage real estate investment trust that invests primarily in agency mortgage-backed securities (or MBS) on a leveraged basis. The firm's asset portfolio is comprised of residential mortgage pass-through securities, collateralized mortgage obligations (or CMO), and non-agency MBS. Many of these are guaranteed by government-sponsored enterprises. The majority of American Capital's investments are fixed-rate agency MBS. Most of these are MBS with a 30-year maturity period. The counterparties to most of American Capital's assets are located in North America. Counterparties in Europe also represent a significant percentage of the trust's total portfolio. American Capital derives nearly all its revenue in the form of interest income. It currently generates $4.5 billion in annual net revenue and trades at a market capitalization of $6.6 billion.

AGNC reported its Q2 2022 results on July 25, 2022. Q2 net spread and dollar roll income per share stood at 83 cents, up from 72 cents sequentially. Tangible net book value stood at $11.43 as of June 30, 2022. Economic return on tangible common equity stood at -10.1% compared to -14.4% sequentially. AGNC also reported a net loss per common share of $(0.87). The company's investment portfolio as of June 30, 2022, stood at $61.3 billion. Furthermore, the trust at an average repurchase price of $10.78 per share repurchased 4.7 million common shares. Meanwhile, cash and unencumbered agency MBS amounted approximately $2.8 billion at quarter end.

Due to AGNC's heavily leveraged business model and its high sensitivity to interest rates, its results have been very choppy over the years. We believe that the current lower interest rate environment stemming from weak global growth and the Federal Reserve's dovish stance in the wake of COVID-19 should enable it to weather the challenges well since it will keep spreads attractive and the mortgage market on somewhat solid footing. That said, interest rates are beginning to rise as the Federal Reserve has turned increasingly hawkish.

Over the long-term we think the hefty dividend payout and the volatile nature of the business model will harm earnings per share growth. We also believe that dividend growth will be non-existent for the foreseeable future.

Updated July 29th, 2022 by Samuel Smith

AGNC is currently trading at 4.8 times its projected 2022 earnings, and we see this as undervalued based on its longer-term P/E averages. As a result, we expect valuation multiple expansion over the next half decade. The dividend yield is uncertain moving forward as the company has a history of cutting its dividend during times of uncertainty. However, our current estimate implies a yield that is above historical averages.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2027
Payout	120%	114%	-363%	459%	129%	106%	1029%	96%	56%	49%	55%	58%

Given that it had its IPO in 2008 – in the midst of the financial crisis – it is hard to get an accurate picture of exactly how it can be expected to perform during this recession. However, the mortgage backed security industry – given its leverage and interest rate sensitivity – is very prone to underperform when the housing market experiences a downturn and mortgage foreclosures rise. As a result, it should not be viewed as a safe, defensive stock. That being said, its record thus far has been fairly strong, with industry-leading total economic return (NAV-based) and total stock return (share price-based).

This outperformance has been driven by its highly efficient operating cost structure and the competitive advantage that it enjoys through economies of scale as one of only a few residential mortgage REITs with a market capitalization of above $5 billion. The trust also strives to guard against downside and enhance shareholder total returns by utilizing a comprehensive risk management framework that is predicated on careful asset selection, disciplined hedging, and diversified funding.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

AGNC offers investors an attractive current dividend yield of 11.4% and a discount to fair value in its earnings multiple. As a result, we expect 16.6% annualized total returns over the next half decade. That said, the earnings stream is unpredictable and highly leveraged. Still, the annualized total return potential is so high that we rate shares a speculative Buy.
