Overview & Current Events

Axis Capital is a global insurer and reinsurer that was founded in 2001. It is split into Insurance and Reinsurance divisions, with the former making up just over half of total revenue. It offers a broad range of risk transfer products for a diverse base of customers and has a market capitalization of $4.2 billion and about $5.3 billion in annual revenue. Axis also has an impressive 19-year streak of dividend increases.

Axis reported second quarter earnings on July 26th, 2022, and results were much weaker than expected on both the top and bottom lines. Earnings-per-share came to 32 cents, which missed estimates by 90 cents. Revenue was down 11% year-over-year to $1.2 billion, which missed expectations by more than $100 million. On a dollar basis, earnings came to $27 million, down sharply from $228 million a year ago.

Operating income was $149 million, or $1.74 per share. These were down from $171 million, or $2.00 per share, in the year-ago period. This does not include a $16 million charge resulting from reorganization expenses.

The company's fixed income portfolio book yield was 2.4% at the end of Q2, and market yield was 4.3%.

Book value declined 8% from Q1, driven by net unrealized losses and common dividends declared, partially offset by a small amount of net income.

The company repurchased 600k shares during the quarter for $35 million.

Gross premiums written increased by $172 million, or 9%, to $2.1 billion. The insurance segment led the way with 16% growth, partially offset by a decline of 4% in the reinsurance segment.

We now see $6.35 in earnings-per-share for this year, a slight reduction from Q1.

Earnings-per-share have been tremendously volatile during the past decade, which is expected for an insurer. Axis' profits rise and fall based upon how efficiently it writes premiums along with factors that are out of its control, including claims, as we saw in 2019, and especially in 2020. Typical weather/catastrophe losses weighed on 2020, but COVID-19 did as well, which shouldn't be repeated going forward from 2022.

Axis benefits from higher interest rates as its investment income rises commensurately. We forecast 5% growth going forward from the current base. Axis continues to grow its business organically through prudent risk taking, in addition to further acquisitions. There is potential room for additional upside should Axis avoid years like 2017 in the future, or if it completes a sizable acquisition. Overall, Axis looks well positioned for maintaining its current book value and in our view, continues to be well-managed. However, the fact remains its earnings are largely outside of its control, and the long-term earnings growth outlook is murky from here.

We see the dividend growing at a low single digit rate and may reach $1.99 or so in the next five years.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	Now	2027
Avg. P/B	78%	95%	90%	99%	94%	113%	111%	106%	85%	89%	100%	95%
Avg. Yld.	2.9%	2.3%	2.4%	2.3%	2.6%	2.5%	2.9%	2.7%	3.5%	3.3%	3.5%	3.4%

The company's price-to-book ratio has moved around significantly as its fortunes have risen and fallen, similar to other insurance companies' valuations. The stock is down since our last update, and shares are now trading closer to our estimate of fair value, and with a 3.5% dividend yield. We therefore forecast a small headwind to total returns from the valuation in the coming years.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2027
Payout	28%	19%	21%	30%	32%	---	82%	60%	---	33%	27%	25%

Axis' payout ratio is only 27% of earnings, so we find the dividend to be reasonably safe, even with the volatility the stock has shown. Importantly, management has proven willing and able to prioritize dividend increases over the past two decades, and we don't see that changing. We note that Axis routinely produces full-year losses from an earnings perspective due to catastrophes and other losses but has managed to continue to fund the dividend with the balance sheet in those cases. For this reason, the payout ratio is somewhat less important.

Competitive advantages are tough to come by for insurers, and Axis is no different. On the bright side, recessions tend not to sway performance one way or the other, so there is a diversifying component to adding Axis to one's portfolio.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

We see Axis as somewhat overvalued and offering investors total annual return potential of 7% in the coming years. We see very limited growth from 2021 levels given the company's history of large, unexpected losses on events like the pandemic, typhoons, etc. We still believe Axis is well managed but note that its earnings and book value growth are largely out of its control. With total return prospects coming down from our last update, we are reiterating Axis at a hold rating.
