Overview & Current Events

Garmin is a technology company based in Switzerland. It manufactures navigation, communication, and information devices and applications that are enabled by GPS. Its business segments are as follows: Auto, Aviation, Marine, Outdoor, and Fitness. The Auto segment offers auto navigation products for vehicles. The Aviation segment includes navigation, communications transmitters and receivers, multi-function displays, electronic flight instrumentation systems, automatic flight control systems, and traffic advisory systems. The Marine segment includes products for recreational boats. The Outdoor segment makes products for outdoor activities, while the Fitness segment makes products designed for activity tracking. Garmin produces about $5 billion in annual revenue and has a $19 billion market capitalization.

Garmin reported second quarter earnings on July 27th, 2022, and results were mixed. Earnings-per-share showed a small beat, besting estimates by four cents at $1.44. However, revenue declined almost 7% year-over-year to $1.24 billion and missed estimates by $130 million.

Revenue was negatively impacted by a 34% decline in the company's fitness segment sales. Marine and auto also saw declines in revenue, while outdoor and aviation outperformed. Garmin also said the strong US dollar was a $57 million negative impact during Q2.

Gross margins were 58.7% of revenue while operating margins came to 23.6%. That saw operating income decline 21% year-over-year to $293 million.

Garmin slashed guidance for the year to $5 billion in revenue, down from $5.5 billion previously. In addition, adjusted earnings-per-share is now expected at $4.90, down sharply from $5.90 previously. We've updated our estimate accordingly.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2027

Shares¹	195.6	195.2	191.8	189.7	188.6	188.2	189.5	191.2	191.6	192.8	193.0	193.0

Garmin has engineered a major turnaround due to structural changes in the technology industry. Garmin rose to prominence due in large part to its automotive GPS devices. However, GPS devices for the automotive industry were rendered virtually obsolete with the widespread adoption of the smartphone.

As a result, Garmin has restructured itself around the aviation, marine, outdoor, and fitness markets, and has had success in those categories. After a very successful year in 2019 where earnings followed another successful performance in 2018, Garmin posted outstanding growth in 2020. We expect 10% annual earnings growth through 2027 as this year's earnings are now expected to decline, but temporarily. Dividends are expected to grow at a slower rate, and we see the payout rising to $3.73 per share by 2027, following the most recent increase of 10%.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	Now	2027
Avg. P/E	15.1	14.6	18.1	17.4	15.7	18.0	17.2	18.6	18.9	24.6	20.0	19.0
Avg. Yld.	4.3%	4.5%	3.5%	4.7%	4.6%	3.9%	3.4%	2.7%	2.5%	1.9%	3.0%	2.5%

In the past 10 years, Garmin stock traded with an average price-to-earnings ratio of ~17; on this basis, the stock looks overvalued today. However, more recently, shares have been valued at higher multiples. Shares trade at 20 times earnings estimates for 2022, ahead of our fair value of 19 times earnings. We see the stock as slightly overvalued at the moment, despite months of weak performance from the share price. The yield is now back up to 3.0% as a result of the lower price and higher payout.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2027
Payout	65%	66%	64%	82%	72%	69%	58%	50%	47%	46%	60%	47%

The dividend appears secure, with a payout ratio of 60% of earnings. During the Great Recession in 2008-2009, the company saw earnings drop, but managed to continue to pay out its dividend. We do not believe Garmin would be resistant to a prolonged recession when consumers reduce spending on discretionary technology products.

Garmin does not possess many notable competitive advantages, which are hard to come by in the technology sector. Technology is a highly competitive and rapidly changing industry. Garmin lost its advantage in automotive GPS devices when trends changed related to widespread smartphone adoption. However, the company has been investing heavily in non-automotive markets to fuel future growth, and we note its leadership in Aviation and Marine products.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Garmin is a financially healthy company with a very strong balance sheet, and decent growth. The company has turned the corner on growth, successfully lapping the pandemic period. Following Q2 results, total annual returns are estimated at 11.2%. We see the valuation as a slight headwind, while our growth estimate of 10%, and yield of 3% helping drive returns strong enough to warrant a buy rating.
