Overview & Current Events

S&P Global is a worldwide provider of financial services and business information with a market capitalization of $131 billion and revenue of about $12 billion. Through its various segments, it provides credit ratings, benchmarks and indices, analytics, and other data to commodity market participants, capital markets, and automotive markets. The company's early-2022 acquisition of IHS Markit boosted its pro forma revenue by about 50%. S&P Global has paid dividends continuously since 1937 and has increased its payout for 49 consecutive years.

S&P reported second quarter earnings on August 2nd, 2022, and results were weaker than expected. The company posted revenue of $2.99 billion, which was up 49% year-over-year on the IHS Markit acquisition, but missed expectations by $10 million. Adjusted earnings-per-share came to $2.81, which missed expectations by 12 cents, and declined from $3.03 in the year-ago period.

Adjusted operating margin was 47.2% of revenue, which was down 280bps year-over-year. This was primarily attributable to lower ratings transactions revenue and increases in technology expenses. The company noted it remains on track to achieve all of its merger-related synergies with the IHS Markit acquisition. The company said lower debt issuances continue to weigh on results both for revenue and margins. Pro-forma revenue was down from $3.11 billion to $2.97 billion year-over-year.

We now see $11.50 in earnings-per-share for this year following weak results, and note that so long as interest rates remain elevated, revenue growth will be difficult to achieve.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

S&P Global's business has benefited from a series of favorable secular trends. Since the Great Recession in 2009, total corporate debt has been on a steady rise, which means more ratings are needed. Lower global interest rates have continued to lead to more and more issuances of debt. However, this tailwind was quickly unwound in Q1, at least temporarily. In addition, the company has three other strong segments that aren't as dependent upon rates remaining low, should they rise again in the future. This diversification away from ratings has been strengthened by the IHS Markit acquisition.

Investors are also becoming increasingly sophisticated and thus demand more real-time data and analytics. Moreover, there is an accelerating demand for index-related investments, such as ETFs.

S&P Global has grown consistently since the financial crisis, boosting revenue and operating margins on a regular basis, with 2020 and 2021 results showing a continuation of this trend. We think S&P Global will see a tailwind from its buyback, as well as mid-single-digit revenue gains, and some measure of margin expansion to get to our target of 10% earnings-per-share growth annually in the coming years. That is lower than the company's historical rate of growth but given the immense growth the company has already seen it is prudent to temper one's expectations. We think S&P Global has a very bright outlook, particularly given recent IHS Markit acquisition. S&P Global has shown it can continue to raise operating margins and boost the top line organically and via acquisitions.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	Now	2027
Avg. P/E	---	19.2	21.1	21.8	20.3	20.9	22.6	24.2	27.1	29.4	34.1	26.0
Avg. Yld.	---	1.8%	1.5%	1.3%	1.3%	1.1%	1.0%	1.0%	0.8%	0.8%	0.9%	1.2%

S&P Global's 5-year average price-to-earnings ratio is 23, but we're assessing fair value at 26 times earnings given the sustained, outstanding performances the company has produced. The stock is currently trading at a price-to-earnings ratio of 34.1 and thus, is well ahead of our estimate of fair value, due to a strong rally since our last update. We therefore see a sizable headwind to total returns from the valuation in the coming years.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2027
Payout	---	34%	31%	29%	27%	24%	24%	24%	23%	22%	30%	32%

The most important feature of S&P Global is its strong competitive position. It operates in the highly concentrated financial ratings industry where the three well-known rating agencies control over 90% of global financial debt ratings. On the other hand, S&P Global is vulnerable to recessions, as companies, countries and individuals become much more conservative during such periods, and thus their interest in financial services and debt issuance greatly decreases. This was evident in the Great Recession, when S&P Global's earnings-per-share fell -21%, from $2.94 in 2007 to $2.33 in 2009. However, given that it was a financial crisis and most companies saw their earnings collapse, the performance of S&P Global was solid overall. To its credit, S&P Global's earnings thrived in 2020 despite a sharp recessionary period.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

S&P Global enjoys the advantage of an oligopoly in the ratings industry and has ample room to keep growing at a rapid pace in all its segments for years. With earnings growth of 10%, we expect 5.2% average annual returns over the next five years after accounting for dividends and a small valuation headwind. S&P Global is a Dividend Aristocrat, but the valuation has deteriorated since our last update. Shares continue to earn a hold rating.
