Overview & Current Events

Universal Corporation is the world's largest leaf tobacco exporter and importer. The company is the wholesale purchaser and processor of tobacco that operates between farms and the companies that manufacture cigarettes, pipe tobacco, and cigars. Universal Corporation was founded in 1886 and is headquartered in Richmond, Virginia. With 51 years of dividend increases, Universal Corporation is a Dividend King.

Universal Corporation reported its first quarter (fiscal 2023) earnings results in August. The company generated revenues of $430 million during the quarter, which was 23% more than the revenues that Universal Corporation generated during the previous year's period. Management explains that revenues were up due to a stronger product mix primarily. Universal's gross margin was up slightly compared to the previous year's period, which is why operating income, adjusted for one-time expenses, was up year-over-year, unlike the previous quarter.

Universal's adjusted earnings-per-share totaled $0.25 during the quarter, which was down on a year-over-year basis, despite higher operating income. The difference can be attributed to higher taxes and higher interest expenses. The company has not provided guidance for the current fiscal year, but comments indicate that demand is healthy, particularly in the leaf tobacco market. Still, with headwinds from higher interest expenses, a profit pullback is likely.

Universal Corporation's earnings-per-share during fiscal 2020 were lower than the earnings-per-share that Universal generated during fiscal 2010, a full decade earlier. There were some movements in Universal's earnings-per-share during the last couple of years, but without a clear direction. Earnings grew in some years and declined in other years, to essentially offset each other. Overall Universal Corporation's results during the last decade were not convincing, as the company's track record in terms of earnings growth is weak.

As the leader in a declining industry, we do not expect the company to deliver strong business growth in the future. The company's earnings-per-share could still rise over the next couple of years, however. Universal Corporation's shares trade at a moderate valuation based on the earnings and cash flows that the company generates. Universal Corporation also does not need to invest large amounts of money into its business, as the industry is not experiencing any meaningful growth. This gives Universal Corporation the ability to utilize a substantial amount of its free cash flows for share repurchases. Through a declining share count, Universal Corporation could be able to deliver some earnings-per-share growth during the coming years. We believe that an annual earnings-per-share growth rate in the low-single-digits is possible for this tobacco corporation, largely due to the possibility of buybacks, even though its overall business will continue to trend down in the long run.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	Now	2028
Avg. P/E	10.6	10.5	12.5	14.3	16.3	16.0	13.0	12.6	13.9	15.3	13.4	13.0

Universal Corporation traded at very low valuations during and following the last financial crisis, but shares became more expensive in the more recent past. Today, shares trade at more than 13 times fiscal 2023's expected net profits. This is slightly above our current fair value earnings multiple. Due to the company's relatively weak track record we do not believe that a mid-teens earnings multiple is appropriate for Universal.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028
Payout	42.5%	38.5%	50.7%	53.6%	54.8%	49.7%	67.4%	87.1%	72.5%	82.3%	90.3%	88.1%

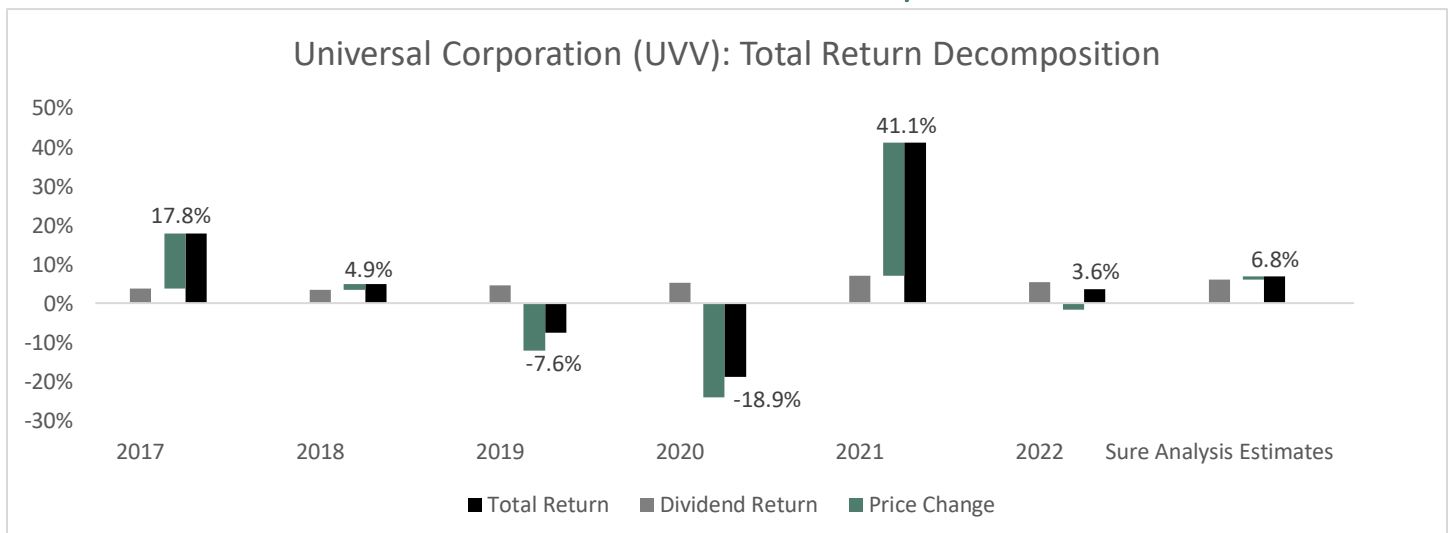

Universal Corporation has paid out roughly 50% of its net profits throughout much of the last decade, although there were significant swings both up and down during that time frame. The dividend increase in fiscal 2019, which was the result of management's strategic review and which lifted Universal Corporation's dividend by 36%, has made the dividend payout ratio jump to a significantly higher level. Coupled with an earnings decline in 2020, this has lifted Universal's dividend payout ratio to a pretty high level. Management seemingly wants to continue to pay its dividend despite the high payout ratio, as the company raised the payout slightly in 2020, 2021, and 2022.

Universal Corporation is active in an industry that has seen its peak. This means that its growth outlook on a company-wide basis is not positive. On the other hand, this means that there is no need for large investments, which results in relatively high free cash generation. The company does not have to worry about competition from new market entrants.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Universal Corporation does not have a convincing long-term growth track record, but thanks to share repurchases, the company could generate at least some earnings-per-share growth in the long run. Shareholders get an above-average dividend yield at current prices. Universal earns a hold recommendation today, due to the fact that shares trade close to fair value and since the forecasted total returns are solid but not overly attractive.
