Instead of EPS, we use funds from operations per share (FFO/S) as Dream Office's primary growth metric. We use FFO/S because it more accurately reflects a REIT's true performance, as it accounts for the effects of real estate depreciation over time. Dream Office's FFO/S has been very volatile over the last decade from inconsistent funds-from-operations, and also a rapidly increasing share count to 2014-2015, and then decreasing by over 50% from years 2016-2020. Since 2016, the trust has been engaged in aggressive buybacks, dramatically reducing the shares outstanding.

We expect disruption from the growing work-from-home movement to weigh on growth in the years to come. Given the company's considerable exposure to high quality assets in Toronto and fairly low payout ratio, it should be able to weather the storm better than some peers, but will still likely only see slow growth. Combining some rent growth alongside buybacks, we forecast 4% annualized FFO per share growth through 2027.

Dream Office's average price to funds from operations ratio (P/FFO) has deviated significantly around its historic average of 10.6. Comparing the current P/FFO ratios to its historic averages, Dream Office is overvalued at current prices. Given the uncertainty facing the global economy and office sector right now, we are lowering our fair value estimate to 9 times FFO, which is below the current price to FFO ratio. We therefore expect valuation multiple compression to provide a headwind to total returns moving forward.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2027
Payout	56%	62%	70%	79%	60%	62%	58%	60%	66%	43%	59%	53%

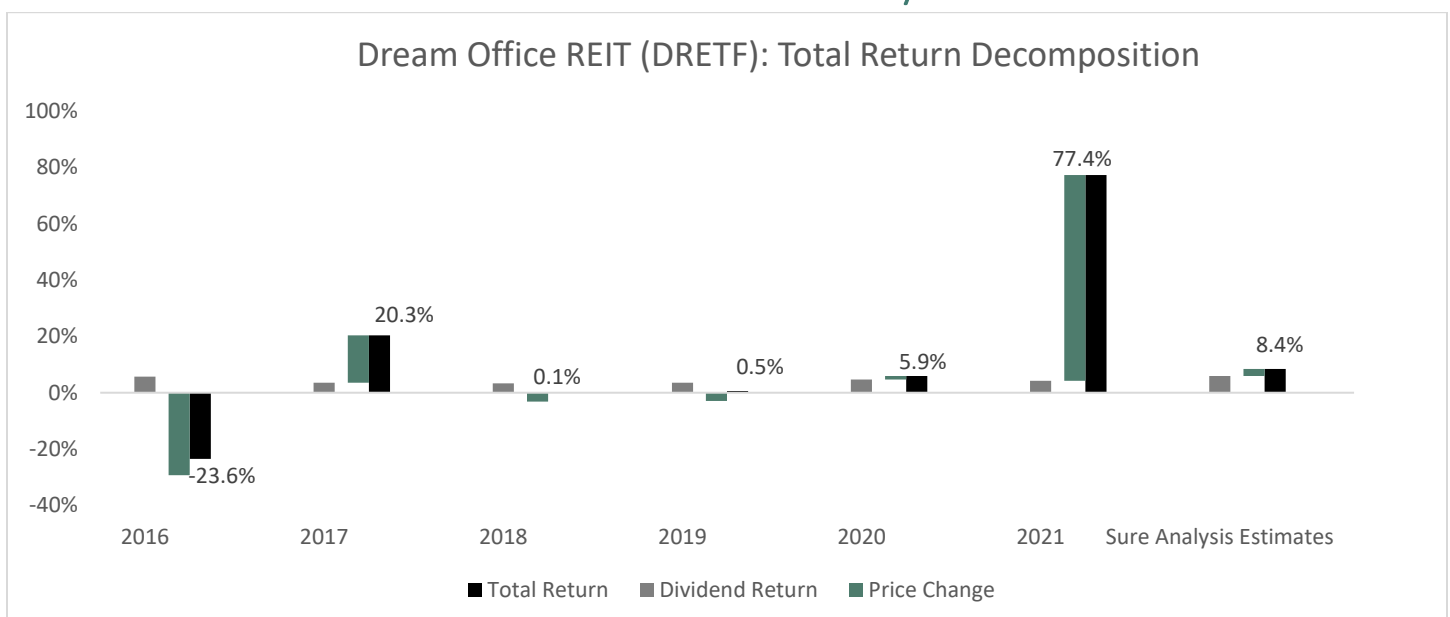

Dream Office has integrated best practices into its environmental platform since 2011. The trust has been proactively trying to reduce its environmental footprint by decreasing its resource consumption and greenhouse gas emissions. The trust also has a goal to use less energy and water to decrease waste to the environment. One way the trust cuts down on resources is by proactively developing and maintaining high-quality, energy-efficient buildings. All of Dream Office's buildings over 100,000 square feet are BOMA BEST Sustainable Buildings certified, which means the buildings are recognized in excellence in energy and environmental management and performance in commercial real estate.

Dream Office has not been around for a recession, but historically companies who operate predominantly office properties do not fare well in recessions. While local businesses are deteriorating, companies would be more likely to close offices rather than start new leases, so in a recession in the Canadian economy Dream Global should be adversely affected from potential losses of current and future tenants.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Overall, we expect total returns of 8.4% annually, mainly driven by Dream Office's dividend yield and FFO-per-share growth that will be somewhat offset by meaningful multiple compression. We believe the REIT's quality diversified portfolio will enable it to weather the current storm. However, due to the slightly elevated valuation, we rate Dream Office REIT as a Hold at current prices and encourage conservative investors to look elsewhere given that the business model is not ideally suited to recessions, and the total return potential is decent.
