Overview & Current Events

McKesson Corporation traces its lineage to 1833 when its founders began to offer wholesale chemicals and pharmaceuticals in New York City. In the 189 years since, McKesson has grown into a powerhouse in the pharmaceutical and medical distribution industry and today, generates about $276 billion in annual revenue and trades with a $54 billion market capitalization.

McKesson reported second quarter earnings on November 1st, 2022, and results were somewhat mixed. The company beat expectations on revenue, with the top line rising 5.4% year-over-year to $70.2 billion. That was $120 million better than estimates. However, adjusted earnings-per-share came to $6.06, which was three cents lower than expected.

The company saw gains in the US pharmaceuticals segment, as well as its technology solutions business. Gains were driven by growth in specialty product volumes, including retail national account customers, and market growth. This was somewhat offset by lower revenue in the International segment, mostly attributable to the planned divestiture of the company's European business.

Earnings-per-share were down about 1% year-over-year, as prior year gains from the company's equity investments that did not repeat, as well as lower contribution from COVID-19 vaccines and tests were partially offset by a lower share count.

McKesson ended the quarter with $1.9 billion in cash and equivalents, down 17% year-over-year.

We now see $24.75 in earnings-per-share for this year after Q2 results.

McKesson's earnings-per-share history is quite robust, having grown nearly every year in the past decade. Indeed, McKesson has managed to average more than 10% earnings-per-share growth annually over this time frame through organic revenue growth and many acquisitions. We do not believe that sort of growth is likely for the longer term as McKesson has grown much larger. As a result, it seems to have neared a plateau on operating margins and revenue growth, but we do still see 7% annual earnings-per-share growth as sustainable moving forward.

McKesson can achieve this result largely via revenue gains, as it continues to acquire growth in bolt-on acquisitions with companies that supplement its current offerings, a strategy that is unlikely to change. Margins have been flat for some time, so we expect that will continue.

The buyback should continue to meaningfully reduce the float over time, which we see as a key driver of earnings-per-share growth. We remain somewhat cautious due to an increasingly hostile regulatory environment for drug wholesalers like McKesson. In addition, constant pressure on pricing from regulators, as well as strong generic conversion are headwinds. However, recent results have been quite supportive of long-term growth.

The dividend has never been a priority for McKesson and that is not likely to change anytime soon. We see the payout rising from today's $2.16 to $3.03 in five years, but the dividend remains just a small fraction of earnings, and the yield is low as a result.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	Now	2028
Avg. P/E	14.9	16.8	17.9	20.1	14.1	12.0	9.7	9.3	9.4	9.3	15.5	13.0
Avg. Yld.	0.8%	0.7%	0.5%	0.5%	0.7%	0.5%	1.1%	1.2%	1.0%	0.8%	0.6%	0.7%

The stock's price-to-earnings ratio has ebbed and flowed in the past decade but today, at 15.5 times earnings, it appears to be overvalued relative to its historical norm. We see fair value as 13 times earnings and thus, McKesson looks overvalued at the moment. This could provide a headwind to total returns over the next five years if the stock's valuation reverts to more normalized levels. The yield should remain about where it is for the foreseeable future, and we note McKesson is not a high-income stock.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028
Payout	13%	11%	9%	11%	10%	10%	11%	11%	10%	8%	9%	9%

The payout ratio will remain very low barring a material strategic shift, which we are not forecasting. Instead, McKesson will almost certainly continue to boost earnings-per-share by reducing the float.

Its competitive advantage is in its willingness to adapt and shift to the changing needs of its customers, its willingness to buy growth and its immense scale, which affords purchasing power. McKesson held up well during calendar 2020 given its product assortment that offers healthcare consumers things they need, and not discretionary items.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

McKesson offers a strong growth outlook, a robust share repurchase program and a valuation that is ahead of our view of fair value. We are forecasting 3.9% annual total returns going forward, consisting of the current 0.6% yield, 7% earnings-per-share growth and a 3.4% headwind from a contracting valuation. We reiterate the stock at a hold rating.
