Overview & Current Events

PSB Holdings is the parent company of Peoples State Bank, or PSB, which opened its doors in 1962 in Wausau, Wisconsin. The company has paid dividends to shareholders continuously since 1965 and has increased its payment for 29 consecutive years. The bank has ten branches, and assets totaling $1.3 billion. The stock trades with a $97 million market cap, making it one of the smallest companies we cover.

PSB reported fourth quarter and full-year earnings on January 25th, 2023, and results were quite strong. Earnings-per-share came to 80 cents, while revenue was up 8.5% year-over-year to $12.43 million.

Noninterest expense rose $499,000 for the fourth quarter to $7.7 million year-over-year. This was related to higher salary and benefits costs.

Loans receivable rose 2.7%, or $25 million, to $962 million. For the full year, loans rose $85.5 million, or 9.8%, from 2021.

Asset quality remains strong, as non-performing assets fell $4.8 million to 0.48% of total assets, less than half the total from a year ago. No loan loss provisions were recorded during 2022, which is quite incredible.

Tangible book value per share was $21.37 at the end of 2022, up from $20.83 in the prior quarter. The bank noted it began a program to repurchase up to 5% of outstanding common shares, and had begun with buying 55,113 shares as part of the program.

We see $3.15 in earnings-per-share for this year, which would be a record.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028

PSB has an impressive track record of growth; it managed to remain profitable during the Great Recession, which is a testament to its lending standards. Since 2011, PSB has managed to grow earnings-per-share by more than 8% annually, on average. We don't see that sort of growth in the future, however, and instead estimate 1% annual expansion, primarily because asset growth has been very slow, and higher interest rates haven't necessarily translated to growth from an earnings-per-share perspective. Should the bank see $3.15 in earnings-per-share for this year, it would be an all-time record.

This lack of strong projected growth is primarily because the bank's spreads had previously expanded widely, and because its loan-to-deposit ratio is stretched at or near the limit, although that is coming down with deposit growth and loan paydowns, both of which reduce the loan-to-deposit ratio. Both levers allow banks to boost profitability of the existing asset base by improving margins, and producing leverage, respectively. PSB has done these things well in recent years but given that its net interest margin is still near 3%, and that its loan-to-deposit ratio is still elevated, we see limited catalysts for outsized growth.

PSB almost certainly won't be able to produce anything like the growth it has for the past decade in the current environment, particularly with already-elevated earnings.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	Now	2028
Avg. P/E	10.1	8.5	8.7	8.6	13.8	10.7	9.7	8.8	8.7	7.1	7.0	10.0
Avg. Yld.	2.7%	2.5%	2.0%	1.9%	1.5%	1.5%	1.5%	1.1%	1.8%	2.2%	2.3%	1.8%

PSB's valuation has remained very low for much of the past decade despite its outstanding profitability and strong growth. The average P/E ratio for the past decade is just 9. However, we see fair value at 10 times earnings given the bank's strong track record of profitability and growth. We also believe this multiple accounts for slower growth moving forward. At 7 times earnings today, the stock is heavily undervalued in our view.

The yield stands at 2.3%, which is more in line with historical standards. We see the yield having the potential to decline slightly in the years to come if the valuation improves.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

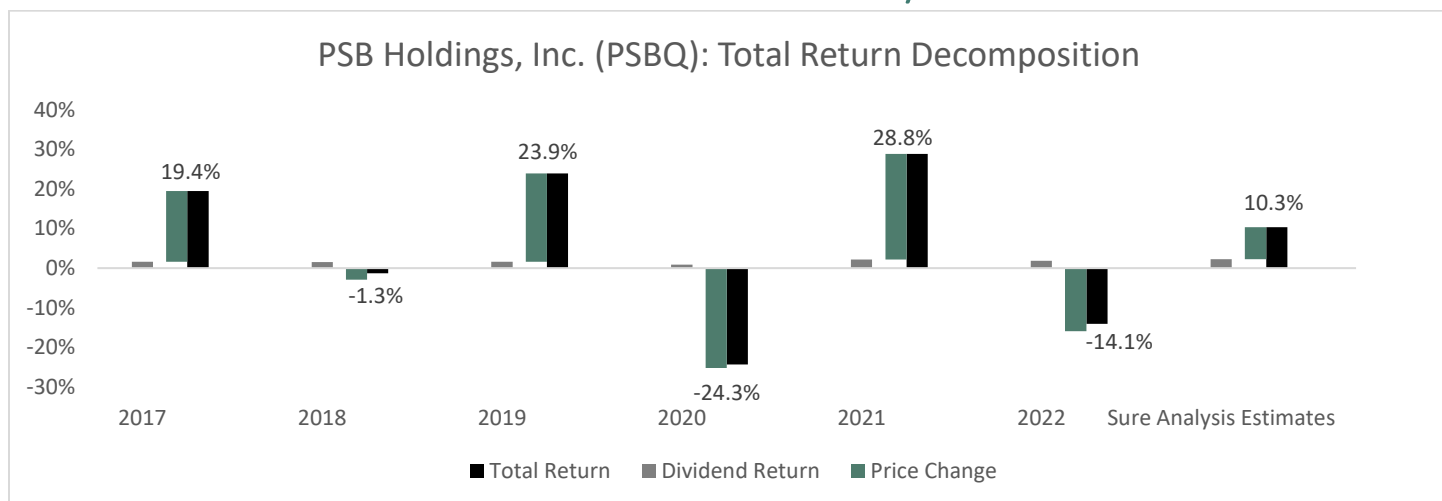

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028
Payout	27%	21%	17%	16%	20%	16%	15%	10%	15%	16%	16%	18%

Competitive advantages are tough to come by in banking, but PSB does have a strong brand in parts of Wisconsin. In addition, its lending standards are helping, as it did during the last downturn. The dividend is also very safe at just 16% of earnings, and there is plenty of room for future raises, as well as plenty of margin of safety if a prolonged recession were to strike.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

We see PSB's total return outlook as having improved to 10.3%, which is based on the 2.3% yield, 1% growth, and a 7.4% tailwind from the valuation. The bank's outlook for rate spreads is uninspiring. However, we still see a tough road for growth ahead from this year's base of earnings. With total returns of 10.3% projected, we are upgrading the stock from hold to buy.
