Overview & Current Events

Silgan Holdings manufactures and sells metal and plastic containers, as well as packaging closures. Its containers are found in everyday food consumables such as pet food, fruits and vegetables, and drinks, while its closures are applied to the beverage, garden, and personal care products. The company generates nearly $5.47 billion in revenues and is based in Stamford, Connecticut.

On January 25th, 2023, Silgan reported its Q4-2022 and full-year results for the period ending December 31st, 2022. Quarterly revenues rose 1.1% year-over-year, reaching $1.46 billion. Total revenues for the year amounted to a record $6.41 billion and were up 12.9% year-over-year. Silgan achieved record revenue and segment income in two of its three segments for the year.

Specifically, while the metal containers segment experienced a decline of 11% in unit volumes year-over-year, its sales grew 20.1% to $1.21 billion as a result of higher prices. The decrease in unit volumes was principally the result of the impact of customer pre-buy activity in Q4 2021 in advance of significant price increases due to unprecedented metal inflation in 2022. The dispensing & specialty closures division also performed well, with sales reaching a record $2.32 billion, 7.2% higher year-over-year. This increase was primarily the result of higher unit volumes of approximately 1% and the pass-through of higher raw material and other manufacturing costs via increased pricing. Finally, custom containers posted a 2.0% revenue growth to $732 million as price increases, and a favorable mix of products sold exceeded lower unit volumes which came in 8% lower.

Adjusted EPS came in at $0.84, which was a 6.3% increase versus Q4-2021. Accordingly, adjusted EPS for fiscal 2022 totaled $3.98, up 17% year-over-year, and were a new record for the company. GAAP EPS of the year was $3.09. For FY2023, management expects adjusted EPS to land between $3.95 and $4.15. We have utilized the midpoint of this range in our estimates.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028

Over the past decade, Silgan has averaged an EPS and DPS CAGR of 8.0% and 9.6%, respectively. Despite the work-from-home economy gradually fading, demand for packaged and canned foods, as well as sanitization products, has remained at strong levels. Despite exceptional pricing power and management's positive remarks going forward, we lower our EPS CAGR estimate from 9% to 6% to reflect the possibility of lower demand for containers during a potential economic slowdown. A potential decline in volumes caused by an oversupply of Silgan's products could also slow down growth.

Nevertheless, we retain our DPS CAGR forecast at 10% to reflect management's latest bold payout hike and low payout ratio that should afford meaningful payout increases. Silgan has grown its DPS annually for 18 consecutive years.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	Now	2028
Avg. P/E	16.8	17.1	19.9	20.1	22.6	11.1	17.6	12.5	13.5	13.6	12.2	13.0
Avg. Yld.	1.2%	1.2%	1.3%	1.3%	1.1%	1.6%	1.5%	1.5%	1.3%	1.5%	1.3%	1.5%

Silgan's valuation has remained relatively reasonable over the years, rarely outrunning its underlying financial growth. Based on the management's confident guidance, shares are relatively cheaply priced at 12.2 times their FY2023 expected adjusted EPS. We retain our fair P/E ratio at 13 moving forward. The stock's yield has always remained relatively low, at around 1% to 2%. Despite the rapid dividend increases, aggregate dividends paid out (as well as buybacks) have remained quite humble as the company reinvests most of its proceeds back into the business.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028
Payout	19%	21%	23%	27%	15%	20%	25%	17%	17%	21%	16%	19%

Investors can rely on Silgan's dividends since the company's payout ratio has historically remained quite low. It currently stands at 16%. Since the company's IPO in 1996, Silgan has never reported a money-losing quarter. Its products are vital for various consumer staples. Hence, its operations are quite stable, displayed in its 18-year dividend growth record. At the same time, however, Silgan operates in a massively competitive space, with quite thin margins. The company's competitors include firms that are multiple times larger than Silgan, such as the Ball Corp. (BLL), the Packaging Corporation of America (PKG), keeping Silgan's net profit margins as low as 6%.

Overall, we believe that the company has showcased decades of robust cash flow generation, with little volatility to its financials. Its operations should remain relatively stable even under adverse economic conditions. Silgan's financial resiliency is evident by the 2026 senior secured notes issue in the midst of the pandemic, in which Silgan managed to secure $500 million at an ultra-low rate of 1.4%.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Silgan has a long history of stable returns, lacking any wild fluctuations in its share price throughout the decades. Combining our relatively modest growth expectations, the dividend yield, and the potential for a valuation expansion towards its average, we estimate annualized returns of around 8.6% in the medium-term. Hence, we rate shares a hold. Regardless, we remind investors that they must be aware of the company's razor-thin net income margins, which could easily be compressed following incompetence in passing inflationary costs through. Failure to do so could impact future returns. The pass-through of costs to Silgan's product pricing has been managed exceptionally thus far, nonetheless.
