Overview & Current Events

Target was founded in 1902 and after a failed bid to expand into Canada, has operations solely in the U.S. market. Its business consists of about 1,850 big box stores, which offer general merchandise and food, as well as serving as distribution points for the company's burgeoning e-commerce business. Target has a market capitalization of $75 billion and should produce about $110 billion in total revenue this year.

Target reported fourth quarter and full-year earnings on February 28th, 2023, and results were better than expected on both the top and bottom lines, and by wide margins. However, guidance for this year was much lower than consensus estimates.

Adjusted earnings-per-share came to $1.89 in Q4, which was 49 cents better than expected. Revenue was up 1.3% year-over-year to $31.4 billion, which was nearly $700 million ahead of estimates. Comparable sales were up 0.7%, and the company noted this was on top of a gain of 8.9% in the year-ago period. Management noted guest traffic in the stores remains strong. Comparable sales were 2.4% better than estimated.

Operating income declined almost half to $1.2 billion, while adjusted EBITDA was $1.87 billion. This was ~$200 million ahead of expectations.

Gross margins were 22.7% of revenue, down 300 basis points, due to higher clearance and promotional activity, higher inventory shrink, and higher merchandise costs. Inventory fell 3% year-over-year.

The company guided for $7.75 to $8.75 in earnings-per-share for this year, and we've initiated our estimate accordingly.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Target has grown its earnings-per-share at an average annual rate of nearly 13% during the last decade. Due to fierce competition and the failed attempt to expand to Canada, Target's earnings-per-share remained almost flat from 2012 to 2017. However, turnaround efforts have borne fruit and as a result, Target has significantly improved its performance in recent quarters. The company has reduced its share count by about -4.8% per year in the last six years, although the pace of buybacks has slowed as the share price has risen. Overall, we expect 10% annualized growth from what should be a low level for 2023 given margin issues that cropped up in recent quarters.

We see continued comparable sales growth as driving results, along with sizable margin expansion from low levels in 2022 and 2023, and a tailwind from the buyback. Target's digital efforts are also working extremely nicely, as we saw again in 2021 results, and the company's small-format stores are performing very well, opening a new avenue of growth for the company in the coming years. The remaining buyback authorization should be good for a significant tailwind to earnings-per-share in the coming years. However, we note that Target remains committed to investing in its digital capabilities, as well as its 50+ year streak of dividend increases. The only caution is on margins, which doesn't appear to have been resolved as of early-2023.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	Now	2028
Avg. P/E	20.7	14.7	16.6	14.6	14.2	14.2	14.4	14.0	16.6	24.8	19.1	16.0
Avg. Yld.	2.4%	3.0%	2.8%	3.2%	4.0%	3.3%	2.8%	2.0%	1.4%	2.7%	2.7%	3.0%

Target shares trade for 19.1 times our earnings estimate for this year, well above our estimate of fair value at 16 times earnings. We note that the 2.7% yield is the highest it's been for years. If the stock reverts to our estimate of fair value over the next five years, it will produce a sizable headwind to total returns.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028
Payout	49%	45%	46%	46%	53%	47%	41%	28%	23%	66%	51%	48%

Target has grown its dividend for more than five decades, making it a Dividend King. The company is heavily investing in its business in order to navigate through the changing landscape in the retail sector. The recent 32% dividend increase was unexpected given its massive size, and the payout ratio is now 51%. We expect the payout ratio to decline starting as earnings rise.

Target's competitive advantage comes from its everyday low prices on attractive merchandise in its guest-friendly stores. However, given the price war in the retail sector, Target's moat faces decline. In addition, as consumers tend to curtail their consumption during recessions, the company is vulnerable in such periods. In 2008, its earnings-per-share fell -14%. Nevertheless, that performance was much better than that of most companies, which saw their earnings collapse during the Great Recession. Moreover, it took only one year for the earnings of Target to return to their pre-crisis level. Therefore, while Target is vulnerable to economic downturns, it is much more resilient than most stocks in such periods. Target is combatting this in part with its massive push towards digital sales channels, which is working.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

We see Target as overvalued despite recent weakness in the stock, and should provide a 3.4% headwind to total returns. Given earnings this year, we see 10% earnings growth going forward. We forecast total returns at 8.8% annually. The yield of 2.7% is high, and the dividend increase streak is impressive and should provide many more years of payout growth. We're reiterating the stock at a hold rating.
