Overview & Current Events

Leggett & Platt is an engineered products manufacturer. The company's products include furniture, bedding components, store fixtures, die castings, and industrial products. Leggett & Platt has 14 business units and more than 20,000 employees. The company qualifies for the Dividend Kings list as it has 52 years of consecutive dividend increases. Leggett & Platt was founded in 1883 and is headquartered in Carthage, MO.

Leggett & Platt reported its first quarter earnings results on May 1. The company reported revenues of $1.21 billion for the quarter, which represents an 8% decline compared to the prior year's quarter. Revenues were slightly higher than the consensus estimate. The company's revenue performance was stronger than the one recorded during the previous quarter, when Leggett & Platt had recorded a bigger revenue decline.

Leggett & Platt generated earnings-per-share of $0.39 during the first quarter, which was weaker than the company's earnings-per-share during the previous quarter, when Leggett & Platt had earned $0.66 per share. A pullback in profits was expected, however, and did not come as a surprise to the market. Management has updated its revenue guidance for the current fiscal year. The company is forecasting revenues of $4.8 billion to $5.2 billion, implying flat to down revenues this year. The earnings-per-share guidance range has been set at $1.50 to $1.90 for 2023. This represents a sizeable decline compared to the earnings-per-share that Leggett & Platt generated during the last couple of years, using the midpoint of the current guidance range of $1.70.

Leggett & Platt grew its earnings-per-share by 14% annually between 2009 and 2019, which is a highly compelling growth rate. This included easy comparables following the last financial crisis, however. More recently, Leggett & Platt's earnings-per-share growth rate declined substantially. Between 2013 and 2019 Leggett & Platt grew its earnings-per-share by 10% annually, and following 2016, there was no growth at all. Leggett & Platt's profitability is also vulnerable during recessions. Between 2008 and 2009, Leggett & Platt's earnings-per-share declined by more than 50%, but the company's profits recovered to a new record level over the following years.

In the long run, Leggett & Platt will likely continue to deliver earnings-per-share growth through a combination of organic sales increases, acquisitions, and ongoing share repurchases, which have lowered the company's share count slightly over the last couple of years, backing out the impact of some share issuances during the Elite Comfort Solutions acquisition. During 2020, profits came under pressure due to the coronavirus-caused recession, but 2021 was a way stronger year again. 2022 was weaker again, and it looks like 2023 will be a worse year.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	Now	2028
Avg. P/E	20.1	19.4	19.5	18.3	20.0	14.5	19.8	20.7	13.9	14.1	18.8	15.0
Avg. Yld.	3.8%	3.5%	2.8%	2.8%	2.9%	4.1%	3.1%	3.6%	4.1%	5.5%	5.8%	6.2%

Leggett & Platt traded at a relatively high valuation throughout much of the last decade, with shares being valued at a high-teens to low-20s earnings multiple during most of these years. Based on management's guidance figures, shares are trading for 19 times this year's earnings right now. We do not believe that the 18-20 times earnings ratios from the past will remain in place forever, as growth slowed down even before the pandemic, which is why a mid-teens earnings multiple seems more appropriate. Shares trade above our fair value estimate today.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028
Payout	76.6%	68.5%	53.8%	51.1%	57.7%	60.5%	61.5%	75.1%	57.1%	77.5%	108%	93.5%

Leggett & Platt's dividend payout ratio was very high - well above 100% - during the last financial crisis. The company nevertheless did not cut its dividend during those troubled times. Due to profit declines in 2022 and 2023, according to current management forecasts, the payout ratio is climbing. So far, Leggett & Platt has not cut the dividend, but there is a risk that they might do that in the future, even though the company has kept the dividend in place for decades.

Leggett & Platt has a long and successful history, but during the last financial crisis its earnings were decimated. It is likely that another deep recession will also hurt Leggett & Platt, although this will likely be temporary again. Leggett & Platt could continue to make acquisitions in order to grow its size and scale, which serve as advantages versus peers.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Leggett & Platt is a company that has performed well in the past, both in terms of generating earnings growth as well as when it comes to its decades-long dividend growth track record. Going forward, we believe Leggett & Platt's earnings-per-share growth rate will be substantially lower, but the company's earnings-per-share should still continue to grow in the long run. Leggett & Platt will not offer especially attractive total returns over the coming years, according to our current estimates. We rate the stock a hold at current prices.
