Overview & Current Events

Robert Half International (RHI) provides staffing and risk consulting services for companies around the world. The business' 3 segments are Temporary and Consultant Staffing, Permanent Placement Staffing, and Risk Consulting and Internal Audit Services, with consultant staffing constituting the majority of revenues. Temporary and Consultant Staffing includes contributions from different sub-segments including Accountemps, which offers accounting help for companies, Office Team, which provides office workers for companies, Robert Half Technology, which helps companies find IT professionals, and Robert Half Management Resources, which helps businesses find senior-level professionals. The staffing industry has seen a significant uptick in activity since 2020. This is thanks to remote work, which has created more opportunities for employees to switch jobs. In addition, current inflationary conditions and the low unemployment rate have given employees more bargaining power for higher wages. This leads to increased turnover within employers. On April 26th, 2023, Robert Half International reported Q1 2023 results for the period ending March 31st, 2023. The business reported earnings-per-share of $1.14, which fell from $1.52 for the same period of 2022. Revenues of $1.72 billion met expectations but declined 5.4% versus the same period of 2022. While these results were uninspiring, it was the company's second-quarter guidance that really spooked the market. Robert Half pointed to a 9% anticipated decline in revenues. This is a sharp deterioration in Robert Half's business prospects and points to an abrupt downturn in the employment market. With the overall economy still in decent shape, Robert Half's surprising slowdown has caused investors to begin to fret about what may happen to the business if and when an outright recession hits.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028
EPS	$1.83	$2.26	$2.69	$2.67	$2.60	$3.57	$3.90	$2.70	$5.36	$6.03	$4.50	$5.47
DPS	$0.64	$0.72	$0.80	$0.88	$0.96	$1.12	$1.24	$1.36	$1.52	$1.72	$1.92	$2.57
Shares	139	137	135	131	128	124	119	115	113	108	106	101

Over the past 9 years, Robert Half International has seen earnings-per-share grow at an average annualized rate of 14.2%. That earnings growth particularly accelerated in 2021 as workers started to bargain for higher wages and moved between employers more frequently. However, as the firm's last two earnings reports have showed, the labor market has rapidly lost steam. We expect a sizable decline in earnings in 2023 before the company resumes its long-term growth at a 4% annualized pace.

Over the past 5 years, dividend payments have grown at 11.6% annually. We forecast slower annualized dividend growth over the next five years as the company's earnings will take significant time to surpass peak 2022 levels. Robert Half historically has had a low dividend payout ratio, giving it room for significant dividend increases. However, the payout ratio is now creeping up.

On February 9th, Robert Half announced an 11.6% dividend increase, from 43 cents to 48 cents per quarter. This was a solid increase, but investors should not bank on future hikes at nearly the same rate given the slowing earnings trajectory.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	Now	2028
Avg. P/E	20.0	21.1	20.6	15.4	18.7	17.8	15.2	19.9	17.2	16.0	14.7	20.0
Avg. Yld.	1.8%	1.5%	1.4%	2.1%	2.0%	1.8%	2.1%	2.5%	1.7%	1.9%	2.9%	2.3%

Over the past 9 years, Robert Half International has averaged a P/E ratio of 18.2. With the structural increase in demand for staffing services, we believe a slightly higher P/E may be warranted and forecast shares settling at a 20x multiple. Today, the stock offers a 2.9% dividend yield, which is significantly above the company's historic long-term average.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028
Payout	35%	32%	30%	33%	37%	31%	32%	50%	28%	29%	43%	47%

Robert Half International has averaged a payout ratio of 34% over the past 9 years though the ratio is now trending toward the mid-40s. Robert Half can easily support the dividend, particularly since it has a very strong balance sheet with more current assets than total liabilities. While the company saw a brief drop in earnings from the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic, business came roaring back in 2021 and 2022. That said, a longer-running recession could cause a meaningful and sustained downturn in earnings.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Robert Half International offers an opportunity to invest in a business that has seen strong historic growth and stands to benefit from the new changes in employment that have been brought by COVID-19 and the work-from-home economy. Since our last report, shares have fallen sharply amid the sudden slowdown in business. While we trimmed our estimates accordingly, Robert Half International still earns a buy rating with a 12.9% forecasted annualized return over the next five years.
