Overview & Current Events

TJX Companies is a leading off-price retailer of apparel and home fashions in the U.S. and worldwide. As of April 29, 2023, the company operated 4,865 stores in nine countries. These include 1,304 T.J. Maxx (27% of total), 1,189 Marshalls (24%) and 901 HomeGoods (19%) in the United States. TJX also operates 5 e-commerce sites. In a normal economy, the company generates about $50 billion in annual revenue and $3.5 billion in net profit.

Throughout TJX's 40-plus year history, it has experienced a decline in its same-store sales in only two years, including in fiscal 2021 in which it had huge setbacks because of economic lockdowns during the global COVID-19 pandemic. This degree of consistency is exceptional and proves the strength of the business model of the company and its execution. We expect TJX to remain resilient, against Amazon (AMZN) compared to most other retailers, in the long haul because TJX offers great discounts on an attractive selection of merchandise while it also cultivates a "treasure-hunting" experience, which cannot be imitated by the online giant.

On 5/17/23, TJX released its fiscal Q1 2024 results for the period ending 4/29/23. For the quarter, net sales climbed 3.3% to $11.8 billion and adjusted earnings-per-share ("EPS") rose 12% to $0.76. Net sales results were weighed down by HomeGoods stores at which net sales dropped 3% in the U.S. and TJX Canada at which net sales fell 4%, whereas net sales rose 7% at Marmaxx in the U.S., while net sales was flat at TJX International (in Europe and Australia).

During the quarter, TJX repurchased $500 million worth of common stock at ~$76.92 per share. It's planning to buy back ~$2.0 to $2.5 billion of common stock during this fiscal year that ends 2/3/2024. The company increased its quarterly dividend by 12.7% to $0.3325 per share, which is reflected in our DPS row below for 2024. Management improved its fiscal 2024 adjusted EPS guidance to $3.39-$3.48. As a result, we updated our FY2024 EPS estimate at the midpoint of $3.44.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2029

From FY2014 through FY2023, TJX was able to grow EPS by 9.1% per annum. Notably, the results in FY2021 were negatively affected by pandemic impacts and the company just recovered from that in FY2022. With TJX generating more than three-quarters of its sales in the U.S., its sales and earnings will depend primarily on the health of the U.S. economy. In the short term, TJX's sales and earnings could still be disrupted by COVID. However, we expect TJX's long-term outlook to remain solid, but at a slower pace than before as the firm is coming off a much larger base on the back of a recovering economy and higher inflation. The 12.7% dividend increase in FYQ1 2024 shows management's commitment to the dividend. The company also tends to buy back common shares, which would boost EPS. We forecast an EPS growth rate of 9% and dividend-per-share ("DPS") growth rate of 9% through FY2029.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	Now	2029
Avg. P/E	18.9	19.0	20.8	21.6	19.2	20.5	20.6	215	25.6	23.7	23.1	20.0
Avg. Yld.	1.1%	1.2%	1.2%	1.4%	1.7%	1.5%	1.7%	0.5%	1.5%	1.7%	1.7%	1.9%

Excluding the outlier in FY2021, from FY2014 to 2023, shares of TJX traded with an average P/E ratio of 21.1. We believe a multiple of 20 is more or less fair for a growth rate of about 9%. The stock appears to be a bit expensive.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Payout	20%	22%	25%	29%	32%	32%	34%	100%	39%	37%	39%	39%

TJX has a terrific record (EPS was growing during the last recession triggered by a financial crisis) driven by its discounted prices and “treasure-hunting” experience. However, for this recession, its stores, including its e-commerce sites were closed temporarily. And there’s a chance that they could be shut down again on surges in COVID cases. That said, we believe TJX’s model has a competitive advantage not just against its look-alike competitors, but even the Amazon’s of the world. The company has rebounded from the COVID-19 pandemic fairly quickly, but it’s now faced with higher-than-normal inflation that could reduce consumer spending intents in the short term. It ended FY Q1 2024 with cash and cash equivalents of $5,025 million, while its long-term liabilities to equity was 1.8x. The company also restored and began increasing its dividend since December 2020. We expect TJX to continue increasing its dividend in the foreseeable future based on expected growing EPS and a sustainable payout ratio.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

TJX has a good track record, but above-average inflation could be a dampener on growth. In normal markets, the company would grow profits and dividends, and buy back shares. At the current valuation, we estimate TJX will deliver annual total returns of about 7.6% over the next five years, consisting of 9.0% earnings-per-share growth, a forward yield of 1.7%, and a 2.8% headwind from P/E compression. All told, we rate TJX as a Hold at current prices.
